Bylaw officer fired, lawsuit is possible

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Anson, Hindon and Minden's bylaw enforcement officer and chief building official was fired by council and says he will not only seek legal recourse for wrongful dismissal, but run in the next municipal election as well.

Council went into closed committee of the whole last Thursday afternoon after their regular meeting, and voted unanimously to ask Brad Bradamore for his resignation. When Bradamore refused to resign, council terminated his employment, effective immediately.

Bradamore is also suing a previous employer, the town of Port Hope, where he started work as chief building official on February 9, 1987. One year later, on February 9, 1988, Bradamore's employment was terminated, according to Port Hope municipal officials. Reasons cannot be discussed because Bradamore initiated litigation after his dismissal. In the last municipal election he ran for mayor of Port Hope, but lost to Don Chalmers.

The reasoning behind his dismissal with AHM is unclear, says Bradamore, who was later unavailable for comment about the Port Hope litigation. "They just said they didn't figure I could do the job because of my wife's development project," he told the Echo. "It was pretty cruel."

Bradamore's wife Erika is planning a commercial subdivision called Mount Minden, to be located on a hill which runs from Highway 35 to Bobcaygeon Road, across from the Wrightman Realty Corporation.

"Whenever my wife's development came up, I declared a conflict of interest. I wasn't there as Brad Bradamore, chief building official and bylaw enforcement officer. I was there as a private citizen and declared all conflicts. I guess that doesn't sit too well (with council), but I don't know what more a person can do."

Ironically, Reeve Ray Moore made a public apology to Bradamore for "derogatory" comments made during a July 13 meeting just hours before the dismissal. (Moore had

Buyers are now in control of the real estate market

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Following last year's selling boom, the real estate market in Haliburton County is seeing a change in direction. The buyers are now in control.

There are many properties on the market and buyers are taking the time to look around and choose. Last summer's frenzied buyer has been replaced by a slower, more methodical consumer.

"We have a fair number (of homes) for sale, but there is a certain buyer resistance," says Peter Epps, a broker for Century 21 Highlands Realty. "It's a buyer's market rather than a seller's market."

"Last year people were rushing up here and buying anything. They are being more selective this year."

"For the last two years most buying has been almost panic buying," adds Lynn Craigmyle, the broker for Bowes & Cocks. "This is gone now, and it is more of a normal market. People are looking, comparing, and taking a little time to decide which one best suits their needs."

However, there doesn't seem to be any limit to what people are willing to spend. There are a number of houses which seem to be over-priced and staying on the market for long periods of time, but properly-listed property is sold quickly, with a short marketing time.

"Our top of the line is between $150,000 and $180,000," says Don Fevreau, a broker with Montage Real Estate in south-east Haliburton County. "Buyers want year-round access, a four-piece bath, and completely finished. Money doesn't seem to be too much of an object."

"The sky seems to be the limit," agrees Epps. "It's hard to find anything on the market for under $100,000, and up to $300,000 doesn't seem to faze some people at all."

There is a shortage of quality listings though, and people are only willing to pay what the property is worth. Keith Jackson, owner of Keith Jackson Real Estate, says people are looking for "something that's desirable"—new, clean, a good lot, and shoreline. But those properties are hard to find.

"There is a shortage of desirable property at a

Boat regulation illogical:

More education on boating needed first:FOCA

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The government may not be taking the logical first step if it decides to regulate recreational boating in the province, says the president of the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Association.

In Tuesday's Toronto Star, Premier David Peterson was quoted as saying that solicitor-general Steven Offer would be "looking at that, and reviewing it and seeing if there is any effective way we can do it". Peterson was responding to questions about boat licensing and training, neither of which are presently required.

However, Rejeanne Anthon says a licensing system is not what is required. "We are talking about a system of legislation that may be an overkill reaction. We need to get the few who are causing the problems and make them aware that it is unacceptable to be driving the way they are."

Instead of starting out with tougher boating legislation, Anthon would like to see better public education on boating safety, and more police enforcement. FOCA will be submitting these recommendations to a study being conducted by the Canadian Coast Guard and says

"licensing is not high on our agenda".

"Statistics show how few boats are available for patrolling our lakes," she says. "Enforcement is going to be a massive bureaucratic nightmare as far as I'm concerned."

At the moment the Minden OPP has only one marine patrol which randomly patrols a lake in the area. The officer will stop any vessel on the water and check for the proper safety equipment. If the licensing system were to go into effect, Sgt. Steve Adam says it would be a mat-

Gull Lake cottagers want a gypsy moth spray program

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A possible spray program to kill off an infestation of gypsy moths in Lutterworth will be high on the agenda at next week's Gull Lake Cottagers' Association, says president Peter Elmslie.

So far about 20 association members have approached Elmslie with complaints about infestations on their property. According to Agriculture Canada, gypsy moth caterpillars feed on the foliage of most trees—heavy infestations result in complete defoliation; repeated defoliations kill most trees or leave them so weak they become vulnerable to secondary pests.

"I'm not sure of the magnitude of the problem here, but if those caterpillars get a foothold in the area this year, they will keep on expanding," Elmslie told the Echo. "We may just have to nip it in the bud."

The association has already discussed the matter informally, but Elmslie said he needs a significant number of the 250-member group to get involved and decide on a course of action.

"We'll have to look at what we can do. We would need to look into either government or private-based funding. And we'll certainly be keeping abreast of the county's plan."

Don Shortreed, the county's Forest Management Committee chairman, has visited the area, and agrees that something must be done

Present county system should remain basically the same: Stanhope reeve

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Except for a few minor changes, Haliburton County should be left the way it is, says Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis.

"I'm quite satisfied with the status quo," Davis said, responding to the provincial government's recent report on county government. The county formed an ad hoc committee to study the recommendations and Davis made a report on its progress at last Wednesday's Stanhope council meeting.

"I'd say we agreed with 90 per cent of the report. Some of the (county council) members had some pretty frightening ideas but in main, we feel our county is operating quite well the way it is."

One of those "frightening ideas" was to transform the present 10 municipalities into four through amalgamation, Davis said. "The big thing is a change like this can be very stressful on the people it affects. Municipalities can lose their identity and I think there's a lot to be said for the way it is."

"You also have to look at these changes geographically and that would be the main reason not to do it," he said.

No vandalism at dam

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Although some area residents have expressed alarm over what they thought was vandalism at the control dam at Percy Lake, according to a Trent-Severn Waterway representative, there has been no damage.

Larry Tupling, president of the Haliburton Lake Cottagers' Association, received a number of phone calls from property owners concerned that the dam's bolts and winches had been destroyed by someone who "finally got mad enough at the Trent-Severn Waterways for low water levels they decided to do something about it. It's a foolish stunt, but I think it was more of an act of frustration than anything else," Tupling told the Echo.

On behalf of the property owners, Tupling contacted Bob Gator of the Ministry of Natural Resources, who in turn alerted the TSW.

When asked about vandalism, the TSW area manager, Mac Ellis, says "there wasn't any." Ellis says waterway workers had replaced winches, put new ones in front of the dam, and left the old ones lying to the side because they were too heavy to move.

"When we did our safety checks (on Monday) there was nothing we could find. The logs were in the same place we left them."

Tupling says area people were probably so quick to suspect vandalism because water levels is such a "burning issue" with those who use the water in the county.

"Aside from the quality of the water, our biggest concern is the lack of it. For 15 years we've been stonewalled by politicians—it's the big battle along the Trent-Severn that get the high levels. It we could even save six inches of water it would make such a difference."

Trent Severn Waterway report...

The eight days to August 8 saw the stored water in Haliburton Area lakes decline 4.8 percent to 66.1 percent. Though only a light rain occurred in the reserve lakes area, heavier rain that fell in much of the Kawarthas on August 4 caused a small rise there. Flow reductions from many of the reserve lakes were then made on August 9, to save water not needed along the canal route.

Canal route lakes are near their usual mid-summer levels, while the reservoirs had slipped to almost 6 percent below the 10 year average. This level was still more than 7 percent higher than at the same dates in 1987 and 1988.

Corinne Timbers and Harry Davis: Ready to recycle Stanhope's first blue box awarded to girl with environmental interest

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff reporter

Because of her commitment to the environment, Corinne Timbers has received accolades from Stanhope councillors and the township's first "blue box."

The 10-year-old Archie Stouffer Elementary School student made a presentation about the importance of recycling at last Wednesday's council meeting. In recognition of the interest she has shown, Reeve Harry Davis suggested that once the township's recycling program got underway, it should be named the Corinne Timbers Project.

"You're a real credit to the boys and girls of this country," said Davis after Corinne's presentation. "I'm pleased to hear you're learning about the environment at school because waste management and recycling are probably two of the most important issues facing us right now. (If youngsters such as Corinne can be so enthusiastic about it), we shouldn't have too much trouble getting it through the thick heads of old folks like me."

"Our country is in good shape if we've got children like this," said councillor Murray Daniels, as Corinne blushed with pride.

Corinne said she first heard of recycling when she was living in Brampton. Her family was involved in a blue box program, whereby paper, glass and metal refuse was placed in a blue plastic box and picked up with the garbage. This is difficult in the country where there is no garbage pickup, she acknowledged, but a compromise would be to have recycling bins placed at the township's landfill sites.

"Did you know that the average person produces more than one kilogram of garbage in a day? The "Ping pong" balls are being loaded into a helicopter for a Ministry of Natural Resources prescribed burn. The balls are filled with potassium permanganate and injected with antifreezes. A chemical reaction ignites them.

MNR fire clears the way for tree planting

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

FLAMES LEAP UPWARD and smoke billows hundreds of feet into the air as the 100 acres of brush burn in the afternoon heat. Eighteen forest firefighters stand motionless, talking about the weather, and watching the fire approach. The men, mostly from the Ministry of Natural Resources' Fire Centre in Haliburton, were participating in a prescribed burn near Salmon Lake, southeast of Gooderham. The tract of land had purposely been set on fire, to prepare it for the planting white pine.

Six years ago the land, which is on G.W. Martin Lumber Company's Crown Timber licence, was clear-cut (all the trees were removed) and left to regenerate naturally with poplar. The MNR then behaviour specialist at the Salmon Lake burn. "There were light winds and the right amount of time between when we treated it (with herbicide last September) and when we burned it. There were conditions where we would get a good burn out there, but it wouldn't spread to the outside area."

Other factors such as the relative humidity, the initial spread index (how fast the fire will advance), the duff moisture code (the moisture in the organic material on the surface of the soil), fuel types both in and outside of the burn area, and temperature were also considered.

Police departments as far away as Lindsay and Peterborough, airports in Toronto, Ottawa, and Muskoka, all local fire wardens and municipalities, and area cottage associations were notified of the burn in order to calm the public's fears that there was a forest fire.

'I was 15 when I saw Bark Lake burn and I'll never forget it,' says a cottager who didn't know the MNR fire was under control. 'It was horrendous.'

decided it was better suited to white pine, so in the winter of 1987 the young poplar trees were tramped down with a bulldozer, and last year they were sprayed with herbicide. All the trees had to be killed in order to give the white pine a fighting chance.

"We are hoping for some resurgence of poplar, but we want several years of freedom from competition," says Peter Hynard. "We also had to dispose of the slash so that the planters could move through the area easily, and so there would be a spot to plant the tree." Prior to burning the uneven ground was covered with debris, which would make it impossible to dig a hole for planting.

Hoses were laid around the perimeter of the burn area, and six fire crews were stationed along the 12,000 feet of hose. Sprinkler systems were set up around a hunt camp in the area and a large bucket could be attached to the bottom of the helicopter to dump water on any flames that got out of control.

A helicopter dropped "ping pong" balls—small grayish balls filled with potassium permanganate. They had been loaded into a cylinder and fed through a machine which injected them with antifreeze. A chemical reaction ignited the balls within 30 seconds.

The fire took more than two hours to fully ignite, and it was "backed" out to the edges so that it advanced more slowly, and was easier to contain. Thick black smoke rose an estimated 12,000 feet in a column which could be seen for approximately 50 miles.

The helicopter checked the whole area following ignition, and there were no problems with the fire jumping the boundary or "spotting" in the surrounding forest.

The fire has not been officially declared out, and Hynard says it will continue to smoulder until "we get a good soaking". Firecrews are stationed at the site, and will continue to wet down the smouldering embers until they extinguish.

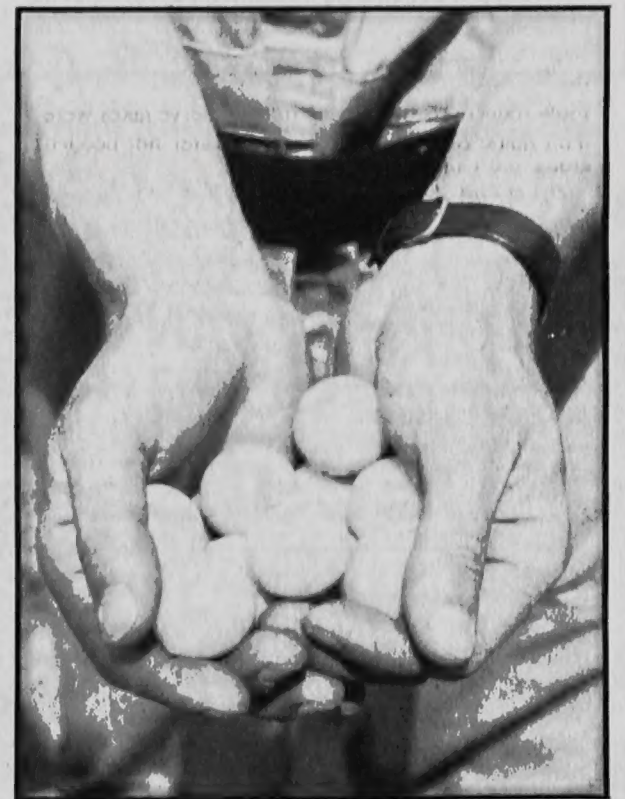

The decision to go ahead with the burn was made on Wednesday, following two months of monitoring weather conditions at the sight. Weather conditions on Friday were perfect for the prescribed burn.

"There was prolonged dry conditions and favourable weather," says John Fontaine, a prescribed burn specialist for southern Ontario, and the fire

However, some resident in the vicinity say they were not adequately notified before the burn took place. They would have liked to have seen more public education, and posters put up at the Irondale store where people could see them.

"I was 15 when I saw Bark Lake burn and I'll never forget it," says one Salerno Lake cottager who did not want to be identified. "It was horrendous. Miles and miles of bush burning. And when we saw smoke coming up (on Friday) and we figured it was a cottage on fire. Your heart just stops. When we see a plume of smoke in the air, what are we supposed to think?"

There are 25 prescribed burns planned for this region which covers most of southern Ontario, but Fontaine says all the burns that are planned are not necessarily performed. He also says prescribed burns in northern Ontario average 500 hectares (approximately 1250 acres) and that the Salmon Lake burn was "small by provincial standards".

Allegations untrue: Bradamore

said Bradamore spoke before thinking. "I demanded one," says Bradamore. "I told him if he didn't apologize I would be asking for one through the newspapers."

Because Bradamore is looking into a wrongful dismissal suit, Moore says council can't discuss the matter, but adds the former employee "was highly intelligent and good at his job."

"It was a council decision that he be let go, and the main reason was that council thought he was spending too much time on his own projects, which will now have to be proven in a court of law, it seems."

Moore says the dismissal has nothing to do with conflict of interest concerning Mrs. Bradamore's projects, and adds that only elected officials need to declare any conflicts.

"He had no conflict of interest because we don't have regulations or a code of ethics which says he couldn't have involvement in development... We can't fault him for that. There was no hidden illegal thing to be found anywhere."

Still, Bradamore denies allegations he was shirking his duties with the municipality in order to work on personal projects, and says that is why he refused to resign. His workload was hectic with recent increases in development projects, but Bradamore always handled it the best he could, he says.

Moore "says I was doing Erika's project when I should have been working. I'd like him to prove it. I would work on the project at lunch or after hours, but I never did it on their time."

"I don't remember them ever telling me I was not doing my job."

Council members might have believed he had a conflict of interest because of the proposed Mount Minden project, says Bradamore. If this is true, then several other members of council and the Planning Advisory Committee (PAC) would also have conflicts, he adds.

"If I've got a conflict, they better get rid of some more (people with conflicts). If they want a clean slate, clean it. Make it clean for everybody."

"If they tell me I have a conflict of interest, then what about them? They do development all the time."

As Bradamore points out, Moore and councillor Lewis Stevens are both involved in private development projects in the area, and PAC members Dean Elliott and Bill Payne both sell real estate.

"I'm not saying whether they should or shouldn't be on the planning committee. But if they're talking about conflict of interest, they shouldn't just pick out a certain individual. It's like the wild west. They set out a hanging without giving me a trial."

Bradamore says he's done a lot for the municipality since starting last summer, replacing Dick Schell, who now works for Dysart et al.

"I've done more for the community than you could shake a stick at. I've run building seminars and planning seminars. I'm on the BIA (Business Improvement Area). I helped get the donation of the picnic tables on the Village Green. I've done all kinds of stuff like that, and I guess this is my reward."

With about 13 years work experience in areas such as Port Hope, Lindsay and Laxton, Digby and Longford, Bradamore says he'll stay with the BIA in Minden and intends to work as a private planning consultant. One aspect of the job would be to represent developers who must go before the Planning Advisory Committee. "A lot of people don't understand the process of severances and rezonings and they need help."

Sesquicentennial cross a symbol of faith and caring

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The Toronto Diocese's sesquicentennial cross is not a testament to the Anglican church, but rather a witness of people's faith "reaching out and touching others," said Father John Phillips.

"If what we're doing is glorifying the Church of England, then we've missed the point," Father Phillips said at a special service on Thursday night, commemorating the arrival of the cross in Haliburton. "It stands for a risen Lord, a living God."

The large, wooden cross has been taken to the diocese's 256 parishes in celebration of the day, 150 years ago, that John Strachan was named Bishop of the Toronto diocese. It arrived in Minden more than a week ago, and has since travelled to each local parish.

On Thursday, celebrants gathered at Rotary Beach, where St. George's choir, dressed in period costumes and directed by Bill Gliddon, sang hymns from the 1800s. People took turns carrying the cross as it made its way through the park and up the hill to the church. The evensong service which followed explored the history of the diocese and the parish of St. George's.

"The Church of England never saw itself as a universal church," Father Phillips said, adding that the hierarchy in England originally did not want to send a bishop to Canada. Today, there are more black Anglicans than white, and English-speaking Anglicans are a minority, trends which Father Phillips applauded.

On August 4, 1839, the church did bow into pressure and consecrate Bishop Strachan, who with the others was told to "go forth and let the spirit be in you that was in Christ," said Barbara Hodgson, in her history of the diocese.

The Canadian Land and Emigration company built Haliburton's first church in 1864, a "plain, practical and adequate building, 16 by 24 feet," explained Gliddon, who was dressed up to represent Dr. John Peake, St. George's first lay preacher. Unfortunately, Dr. Peake was also the church's organist (actually, he built a musical contraption by putting an accordion on its side and operating it by a foot pump) and only knew two tunes: Evening Hymn and the March of the Men of Harlech.

A blizzard postponed the opening of St. George's and on New Year's Day, 1865, 42 worshippers arrived to hear Rev. Sanderson's dedication. The first resident clergyman was Fred Burk, but he and his wife Louisa were only here four months before they were transferred to St. Paul's in Minden. No one replaced him for four years until the arrival of J.C. Mackenzie who stayed a year and a half. His great-granddaughter, ter of "checking for one more thing".

Education key to boat safety

"Regulation would require more manpower than we have now to do it properly," he says. "But the majority will comply without enforcement. It will be no more difficult to enforce than motor vehicles."

"There are several thousand people who drive motor vehicles without licences, and no doubt several thousand boaters will as well. Eventually they'll get caught."

In order to educate cottagers throughout the province, FOCA is preparing a package—a cottager's guide to better boating. It will include information on the rules governing boating, enforcement, and the role of the cottage association in dealing with boating.

So far this summer 26 people have been killed in boating accidents in Ontario, and drinking is involved in nearly half of all boating deaths.

Peterson refused to comment specifically on how the province was planning to control recreational boating.

Vacant lots in demand price that can be afforded," agrees Ted Saxby, of Rishor, Barnes, and Deitrich.

"I have buyers from Muskoka who are willing to pay high prices for high quality properties, but we don't have anything to sell them," says Linda Beachli, an associate broker with ReMax. "We have nothing on the market to satisfy their needs."

"Buyers are become more sophisticated and demanding more for their dollar. The days of roughing it with an outhouse are over."

Vacant lots are also in demand from people who want to build homes and cottages, but the property is scarce.

"We are scraping the bottom of the barrel at the moment," says Epps. "We have lots of people who would like to buy lots but there are very few available. We could sell a great number if we had them available."

"There has been a high escalation in vacant land prices and vacant lakefront land prices," says Beachli. "In many cases the price has doubled since last year. People are still willing to buy because the availability is so limited."

"The first choice is usually waterfront property," says Craigmyle. "But with prices having risen to what is out of the price range of many people, they are looking at vacant acreage. Not necessarily to be on the water, but close to it."

One thing is certain however, and that is that prices are unlikely to fall in this area. There may be fluctuations in the market, but the demand for cottage country is always present.

Funding needed for spray program to prevent further infestation. The county is currently looking into financial funding for a spray program.

"A number of other counties have formed an association to fight the gypsy moth," says Shortreed. "They have a mandate to get funding from the Ministry of Natural Resources," so Haliburton is looking into the feasibility of joining this group.

Meanwhile, the large, adult female gypsy moths, which are white with black markings, are now laying eggs in masses on area trees. Covered by buff-colour hairs, they resemble small pieces of chamois on the tree trunks, undersides of branches, under loose bark and in tree cavities.

Hundreds of tiny caterpillars will hatch from the eggs in May to continue the defoliation of trees, unless a spray program is initiated next spring.

CHACE Place re-opens

Three months after a fire ripped through CHACE Place Haliburton, the facility is back in full-swing operation in a refurbished, good-as-new building.

The bright red, official opening ribbon was cut on Monday amidst bouquets of red and white balloons. Inside a huge chocolate cake awaited the mouths of children and adults alike.

Contractor Gary Burch had men working at the Highway 121 location every day since the fire, in order to have the building completed by the opening date.

"They had to start from scratch," says Administrator Sue Valm. "Everything needed to be done—plumbing fixtures, carpeting, interior and exterior painting, new roof trusses on the west end of the building. Work was being done here constantly throughout the summer, and we are really thankful for that."

"The room looks fresher and brighter. They've really given it a face-lift."

Heat detectors and auxiliary lighting were also installed and any smoke or heat will set off an internal bell alarm. Before there was just a basic fire detector.

The electrical fire on May 18 started in the equipment rental room, destroying all the cribs and carseats. The entire building and all the equipment received extensive smoke and water damage. Although there were "huge, running lists" of what needed to be replaced, a great deal of the contents could be salvaged.

Papers and correspondence that suffered smoke and water damage were frozen and then peeled apart and photocopied. The door to the office had been closed the night before which helped to save most of the paperwork.

The toys and furniture were sent to Peterborough for a heavy-duty going over, which left them clean, deodorized and ready to put back in operation.

Although CHACE Place did not close its doors completely after the

Hall's Lake dump causes stink at Stanhope council

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Stanhope council can't decide whether dumpsters should remain outside landfill sites or not.

The issue was raised at last Wednesday's council meeting by Deputy Reeve Ann Barker. Now that the dump is fenced and only open during certain hours, she was concerned about people driving in to put garbage into the bins and being either confronted by bears or unable to back out because of a lineup of cars behind them. She suggested that council build a turn-around area.

However, council was hesitant to act on the suggestion because it wasn't sure it wanted the dumpsters to remain there.

"With dumpsters you're encouraging people to throw things in there," said Reeve Harry Davis, who, like other councillors, would prefer that people become familiar with the new hours and only visit the dump when it's open. Yet at Guilford dump in Dysart et al, the dumpsters were removed and people just throw their garbage against the fence, Davis said.

"We're creating another dump-site" outside of the dump, said councillor Murray Daniels. "We're spoiled" because everyone was accustomed to open hours. Davis said that if people in the city can learn to put their garbage out just once or twice a week, they can learn when to take their garbage to the dump.

"It's educating people," Davis said. At the previous meeting, councillors admitted they had not given sufficient notice of the new hours and apologized. One of the reasons why they had decided to fence the dump was a growing frustration over the constant dump fires last year.

In the meantime, council received a letter from an angry cottager who said "the works department and bureaucrats are screwing up our garbage dump."

"The dump should always be open, so that cottagers are encouraged to take their garbage before leaving for home, rather than throwing it into ditches," wrote Verda McDonald. "A lot of money has been spent on an expensive fence to keep people out, except on certain days. This is ridiculous. So the stuff is piled up outside the fence, and there is the cost of moving it inside later."

McDonald said good signs are all that's needed to get people to throw their garbage in the proper place.

But council acknowledged it has a problem. Rather than make any changes now, since people are just becoming familiar with the new set up, it decided to study the matter in the winter and have firm guidelines established before next summer.

In other dump news, council received the consultant's report on the future of the Hall's Lake dump, which the Minister of the Environment had said had reached its capacity and must be closed this winter.

The consultant has three suggestions and recommended the first one: Extend the dump horizontally, vertically or into the gravel pit behind the dump.

Anglicans reach out

Sonny Cook, is a member of St. George's choir today.

A new church had to be built in 1870 and Gliddon said it was "a wooden frame church in traditional Gothic style" and cost $700. The widow of Thomas Chandler Haliburton, chairman of the Company and the man who lent his name to the village and county, came and donated a cabinet organ.

Also in 1870, the West Dysart church was built on a hill on the Old Donald Road, but Gliddon said "it has vanished with a trace." While it stood, "it kept hope and faith alive in the face of great hardships."

By 1891, explained Doug Hodgson, Haliburton's census included only 119 names, and not many of them were Anglicans. Yet the few who were here, managed to keep the church going.

"We've always had people were devoted to reaching out to the community," said Hodgson. "There wasn't much to reach out to and they didn't get much in return."

Then, on January 25, 1920, the sexton came to light to fire before the service and went home to eat some breakfast. While he was there, the church burnt down. Rev. Stringer, "an enthusiastic man who had a lot of strength", decided to use the foundation of the old church and build a larger one. The synod was very generous and with its small congregation, the church was not self-sufficient until the 1950s.

The new parish hall was built in 1967, and the church later sold its Glebe park property to the village of Haliburton. "From what I read in the newspaper, we sold it 25 years too soon." The new addition was finished last year.

In talking about the present day ministry, Hodgson said "it's my opinion the church is stronger than it's ever been, with a wonderful minister and a small number of very, very faithful people."

After the service, refreshments were served. In the days which followed, the cross went to St. John's in Iroquoia, and then onto Victoria County. The pilgrimage will end on October 15, when approximately 30,000 people will gather at the SkyDome in Toronto for a mass service.

Enough

It is the summer of 1991, and Haliburton County is strangely quiet. The streets aren't thronging with people, and parking places are easily found. The exuberant optimism that drove the business community to expand over the previous few years, has faded. Everyone, it seems, is worried, some about economic survival, others about their opportunities to live and work in the community. A future that had seemed so bright in the late 80's, has been tarnished.

What has brought about this bleak, unhappy summer of 1991? Acid rain? Arctic cold fronts? A plague of gypsy moths? None of these, though each of them might have produced the same results. No, the depressing summer of 1991 in Haliburton County has been brought about by avarice and deception. It has a human and a political face, in the person of Tory finance minister Michael Wilson and the goods and service's tax his government imposed on Canadians barely six months before, on January 1, 1991.

How realistic is this sketch of what summer two years hence might be like in Haliburton County? Consider the facts. The GST as currently proposed will suck an additional $5.5 billion dollars out of the pockets of Canadians in year one. The consumer price index is expected to rise at least 2.5 percent as a result of the GST alone, not including any other inflationary pressure the economy might be facing at the time it is imposed. And many economists think that inflation projection is far too low. The tax will be imposed on almost everything we buy — not merely on luxuries, but on gasoline, on electrical bills, on restaurant meals and car repairs, on haircuts and soap. And the tax will be added on before the provincial government takes its cut. The eight percent bite will be applied to the total cost including the GST — taxing the tax, in other words.

The impact of this new tax will be sweeping, and in a tourist area such as Haliburton County, it could be devastating. Even without the GST, Canada, and Ontario, have one of the highest tax rates in the world, and visitors, particularly those from the United States, are increasingly reluctant to come here. Ontario residents themselves are finding the tax levels onerous, as local resort owners acknowledge. When the GST is imposed, people's disposable incomes will fall markedly, and that means luxuries such as cottages and holidays at area resorts will get farther and farther out of reach for most people. A shrinking market, coupled with higher taxes, can only mean economic hardship for the businesses that depend on tourism, and in Haliburton County, almost every business does.

Fortunately, opposition to the new GST proposal is swelling. On main street, you can hear people saying the time has come to get off our complacent behinds and tell Michael Wilson that we will not stand by and watch taxes destroy the economy. Many people are convinced that the only way to drive that message home is a general tax revolt. If every small business that will be hurt by the GST — and more than a million of them, employing the majority of Canadians, will be — refused to remit their corporate income taxes until the GST proposal is repealed, the government would be forced to listen.

Opposing the GST is only part of the challenge that all of us face, however. If we really believe that enough is enough, that taxes are destroying the economic health of the nation, we must also be prepared to give something up. We cannot defend the universality of social programmes and oppose the GST. We cannot argue that taxes should be held in check unless we are prepared to accept reductions in government expenditures.

In the past, Canadians haven't been prepared to acknowledge both sides of the equation. We have said, in effect, that we wanted more, but didn't want to pay a whole lot more for it. The result is a cumulative deficit of more than $350 billion dollars.

The GST may well be devastating to the local economy, and should be vigorously opposed — ultimately, perhaps, by a tax revolt. But an equal measure of anger should be directed at government waste and the public's historical reluctance to demand less in exchange for paying less.

Roadside spraying should stop

To the Editor:

Re: Scenic Route via "the Loop" Wilberforce (Hwy. 648) to Town of Haliburton.

Ever since moving from the City seven years ago, I have enjoyed every trip from Wilberforce to Haliburton, via the Essonville Line, all seasons of the year. The highway winds through the forests, passing many lakes, and in summer enjoyed the scent of the forests, and fresh air.

That is until last Saturday, driving visitors from the south to see our lovely Haliburton Highlands. Just hot day, windows wide open for the breezes. Very after leaving Essonville Line and onto Hwy. 121, there is a long stretch of highway where trees have recently been removed. Someone remarked "What is that whitish green stuff spread on both sides of the highway, to the treeline? The caustic vapours from this stuff caused coughing and sore throats.

It is fortunate the car has an air recycling system, which I pressed, and with all the windows shut tight, we avoided this poisonous stench on this stretch of highway on the return trip.

With all the concern about air pollution, which one of our elected Government representatives ordered this poison to spread along our highway? (We should remember the culprit come election time.) And cannot something be done now to remove what has been spread there?

A letter in the Echo last week mentioned the poison which has been sprayed along the highway in the Gooderham area.

Do all the taxpayers have to write letters to the governments, Federal and Provincial, to try and stop this practice?

Hazel J. Angus

P.S. I thoroughly enjoy reading every issue of your remarkable paper.

Hospital care 'outstanding'

To the Editor:

In July my husband and I were visiting Deer Lodge. He became very ill and was taken to Haliburton Hospital.

The care he received there was outstanding. The kindness shown him by all the staff, and especially the doctor who attended him that day was caring and especially efficient.

We hope that all the townspeople appreciate the hospital and staff that they are fortunate in having.

Sincerely

To the Editor:

In your July 5 weekly magazine, R.D. Lawrence had an interesting and fact-filled column on acid rain. The picture of Trail, B.C., caught my eye because I grew up there. The picture is one of a valley filled with smelter smoke that obscures the mountains and which stunted or killed all vegetation. Landmarks of the picture tell me it is over 25 years old — probably from the time of Mr. Lawrence's book on the subject.

The enclosed recent picture of the same view shows the smoke gone, the mountains clearly visible and I can testify that the vegetation has returned. In other words, Cominco Ltd. has cleaned up its act. I believe that in addition to condemning those that poison the environment, it is equally important to praise those that do something about it.

Yours truly,

Ken Lees

Seniors should be heard

To the Editor:

This is an open letter to All Conservative Parties of Canada and especially to Brian Mulroney. Universality is the corner-stone of Canada's system of social programs — old age pensions, family allowances, unemployment insurance, and public health care, are designed to ensure a decent standard of living for all. We all have a right to the benefits. It's a social contact. It provides security, both financially and emotionally. People count on it. They base their retirement planning on it. During 1988 Federal election one of the opposition themes was that a

THE CROWDS just keep getting bigger and bigger and the Blue Grass Festival held in the village of Haliburton last weekend, just keeps on getting better and better. It wasn't an easy task for the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129 and their helpers to get this big show off the ground in the first three years, but the large crowds that turned out for the Blue Grass music this year proves to one and all that this annual event is here to stay and the future of this musical yearly event never looked brighter. All week long people have been talking about the outstanding bands and singers who performed on stage at Glebe Centennial Park. By Friday at noon most of the camp sites had been filled and some campers moved in as early as Monday and camped there until the show opened on Friday evening. Even though the three day event seemed to be very popular with the visitors here and others who came just for the weekend, interest in the Blue Grass weekend also was running very high with the local people this year. Many of the fans from Haliburton and surrounding area took their trailers and tents to the site and stayed there for the entire weekend. When it comes to camping many have told us that the camping facilities in Glebe Centennial Park, home of the Blue Grass Festival, is just as good or better than anywhere in Ontario. Many have told me that they enjoyed this years show so much that they are making plans for next year already.

Every now and then people come forward with stories of various animals that they have noticed this year that have wandered out of the bush into back yards and onto the highways and roadsides near the village of Haliburton. Some moose have been spotted on the side of the highways and deer seem to be very plentiful in the area. Mrs. Jim Inglis of Haliburton was telling me that she was in her backyard recently and when she looked around there she was face to face with a bear and two cubs. She said that she started to scream and ran into the house and the bear and her cubs went on their merry old way. Mike Easton told me that one morning when he was driving past PineStone Inn and Country Club a group of four foxes crossed the highway in front of his truck.

It's that time of the year once again and time for the Haliburton County Fair which will be held at the Minden Fairgrounds this coming Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 18, 19, 20. The big Fall Fair this year will feature something for both young and old including Conklins midway, a parade, heavy horse show, western horse show, cattle and sheep show, grandstand show, dance, heavy horse draw, Haliburton County miniature train display, Tractor Pull and 4 X 4 truck pull, talent contest, kids day events, horseshoe contest and much, much more.

If you were ever wondering if the people who come back to the Highlands of Haliburton are looking for something to do while they are here, I don't think you have to wonder about it any longer. When we look over the situation we can see that they want to be entertained and that the majority are looking for something to do. Up until just recently I must admit that I was one of a group who was of the opinion that when visitors arrived for the summer they wanted to get away from the rat race and head for the cottage or resort and stay there. We find that this is not the case. At one time it was the opinion of many that when they come up for the summer months they like to take it easy around the cottage, go in swimming off their dock, go golfing and boating and take some time out to wet the line and do a little fishing. Some of the vacationers do like to spend most of their time around the lake and the cottage while others like to hit the road, drive into town and do some shopping while others just want to look around. Take this summer for instance when on most days the weather was so hot that you could cook an egg on the pavement; instead of staying at the cottage and go in swimming you would find many of these same people roaming the streets in Haliburton, Minden and in other villages in the area. Here are just a few examples to prove that when people visit here they are looking to be entertained. Just look at the large crowds that come out for the Haliburton and Minden Rotary Club Carnivals, and Country Good Times in Wilberforce, Midnight Madness, Blue Grass Festival, Gooderham Horseshoe Days, Stanhope Fun Day, the Circus, garage sales and the Fall Fairs in Minden, Wilberforce and Kinmount.

A woman from the city was in one of the local stores in Haliburton one day last week complaining about the fact that they couldn't get parked close to the main street and asking the question why parking is such a big problem here? One of the stores salespeople answered by saying that you can't bring half of Metro Toronto back here for a couple of months and expect to put them all in a small town such as ours. We have plenty of parking spots here in the village, but we can't help it is some of the people have to walk a few steps to get to the main street. You have to do it in Toronto and other major towns and city's and you have to do it here. There is no use of complaining about it.

Keep your garbage to yourself

Clarke

A FEW WEEKS AGO ago the Toronto Star carried an item from Muskoka that demonstrated why there will always be a conflict between cottagers and the residents of cottage country.

I don't mean all residents — or all cottagers — or even very many. But then, it only takes a couple of bad apples to tick people off.

The case in Muskoka involved the classic 'little old lady,' who was buying her groceries at a busy supermarket one Saturday. The process may have taken her a little longer than it might for some others, and as she was picking through her purse for some change, a lady who was waiting behind her said indignantly:

"They know we're going to shop in the stores on the weekend. You'd think they'd have the sense to do their shopping during the week."

The little old lady turned around and decked her with her purse and stomped out. And the very annoyed city lady couldn't find a witness among all the people in the store...

Such minor indignities do cause friction, and I think they are increasing, though I trust they will remain few and far between.

One of the more major problems are those people who want to foist their waste onto other people. Like Metro Toronto, which has spent years dumping mounds of garbage in other municipalities. At this point, they seem to have chosen the Orillia area as their next target, though experts say even that will be only a temporary solution...

But we have also some visitors to Haliburton who like to think big. One of them would like to send cottagers' waste — and it isn't gargage either — over to our neighbourhood, instead of cleaning up their own act.

They have an expression in the city—NIMBY—Not In My Back Yard. They are usually referring to public housing or group homes, and I never thought I'd hear my self saying it up here...

But we have this, ah, sewage-disturber who claims to be an engineer, and apparently comes up here to cottage on Canning Lake, or somewhere on the Kashagawigamog chain.

He has apparently gotten it into his head that NO ONE lives on the Burnt River, so it would be a peachy-keen idea to ship all the sewage from the cottages over there into our river over here at Donald.

It would only cost, he says 25 percent more than treating it at the plant that's right over there, making the bill for the taxpayers some $10 million instead of the $7.5 it's risen to over the past four years while the government dippy-doodles around their promise to fund a sewer extension to serve the resorts.

But this fellow has been trotting his idea around from cottagers' meeting to cottagers' meeting, and apparently getting heard. He implies that the Haliburton Village sewage plant is somehow the cause of ALL the water problems in the chain.

He ignores the fact that the money the community has been trying to extract from the province is supposed to upgrade the plant to help solve future problems — and nobody is saying there is one as yet. (The Ministry of the Environment would, of course, just love to do another study...)

He also ignores the fact that there really are residents on the Burnt, and we don't want any imported sewage from cottagers over there.

I hope that none of the places now being offered along the river in the Donald area are up for sale for fear of the phantom sewer project. Frankly, I think anyone who is selling should be suing this character for devaluing the potential price they would be getting on their land, regardless.

He probably thinks that, because we are mostly permanent residents, with houses that wouldn't get the $169,000-plus prices that the average cottage now gets — that we just don't count.

Well, we're here, we do, and we all say: Not In My Back Yard — or my river either.

He makes such a confusing presentation, and so much at cross-purposes with all the time and money that has been spent on the plan to properly upgrade the plant, that one wonders if it is just a red herring being trotted out to delay things again until the resorts can't afford to pay their share — and then the Liberals are off the hook.

The same sort of stunt they pulled on the Hospital Expansion with their delays and sudden demands to see the colour of our money. The fact that an environment department spokesman suggests they are even entertaining this guy's suggestion to ship sewage cross-country suggests they see it as a wonderful delaying tactic.

If people want to upgrade the quality of water on the Kashagawigamog Lake chain, I suggest they ask council for a by-law requiring that anyone selling a cottage — whether flipping it to make a big profit, or just passing it along in the family — must have the health department check out and approve his septic tank and sewage system — just like anyone who builds a new building has to do.

Don't ask taxpayers to spend a quarter of a million dollars shipping your sewage over to us. Clean up your own act.

IT'S ALWAYS GOOD when the church gets out of itself. It is terrific when the church gets out of its building! We went to St. Georges's Church today. Gathering under the trees overlooking Head lake, and celebrating the Christian family as well as the whole human family out-of-doors was deeply moving.

The worshippers, young and old, seemed quieted by the great cathedral of sky and earth. The altar was the lake and the surrounding hills listened and shared in the hymns of praise. Brisk wind lifted the spirits and warm sun softened the weary flesh.

While the service unfolded and the drama of God's saving history was remembered and enacted, the life of Haliburton continued below. Boats on the lake, water skiers and windsurfers passed our stained glass window. Cars came and went into the busy village and the MNR helicopter lifted to do its searching for forest fires. Stores were opening in town and the ice-cream cones began to grace the hands of Sunday wanderers like torches in the procession.

The prayers of the people of God mingles with the sounds of traffic. The whole community and its life is one sacred event. All of human life is sacred. So is going to church.

I have know other outdoor experiences of worship: In the Army in the fields. In Korea on a mountain top on Easter Sunday morning. Baptismal services at rivers and reservoirs. Camp meetings and gatherings at the side of highways when travelling. There is something profoundly real and majestic when the earth is seen as the cathedral of human worship and praise.

It was not all out there. The warmth of the family of faith shed its own light around us. Hearty singing, smiles and greetings of peace mixed the congregation into a spirited union of hope and faith. The preacher, tired like all preachers are these days, spoke of his longing to see and hear the workings of God among the people. (People will not tell, no matter how much life and joy it may give another, they keep such matters hidden.) Nevertheless the preacher served up the good news and the Bread of Life to his people with love and patience. In a world of what seems like so much prattle it is good to hear the truth that helps you see again.

The ancient service, much of it being rooted in Judaism, unfolded naturally and with special beauty which was enhanced by the creation's share in it. It was and always is a liturgy of expectation and hope. It is never about something that is accomplished, finished, but about the longing of the people of God for peace, justice, truth, meaning, and joy. So like the preacher's longing, the people sigh toward the future that has been promised to us.

Little wonder that the Book of Little Books speaks of the "whole creation groaning and in travail." toward that day when tears will cease and death will be no more.

The hills and the lakes sighed with us in liturgy of thanksgiving and hope today.

"TAKE THAT, you bitch," he yelled. She saw it coming and ducked. But she was backed into a corner, pressed against the kitchen cupboards with little room to manoeuvre. He caught her on the side of the head and for a minute the kitchen reeled. She had know when he came into the house she was in trouble. She had seen that look before.

He'd been out with the boys in the town and as the hours passed, her anxiety increased. Not that she was worried about him. But she had seen the pattern repeated so many times over the years. He'd be a big man at the hotel, buying drinks, laughing, joking and being the life of the place. Then he'd come home all steamed up over something someone had said and he'd take it out on her. What had or hadn't been said didn't matter. In his state anything could be taken the wrong way. All he needed was an excuse to show he was boss.

When they were first married it hadn't been like this. But as the children came and the bills piles up, his temperament seemed to change. It was thought be blamed her for the hard times. After a while she began to think maybe she deserved to be hit, that it was her fault there was not money, no fun anymore.

The kids were upstairs in the bedroom but she knew they weren't asleep. Quiet as frightened rabbits, barely breathing, they listened in silence as she tried to scramble out of the way of another swing.

In the morning he'd be surly, pretending nothing had happened and he might leave her alone for a few days or a few weeks. She never knew how long until the next time; she could only see the signs just before he exploded.

After all these years she still made an attempt to keep it a secret. She felt that somehow the beatings reflected on her, made her a lesser person that she should be treated this way. The shame was to be kept hidden if possible. But in a small community, most people knew what was going on. It was never talked about and she of course wasn't about to bring it up. If asked how she got the black eye, she'd smile weakly, shake her head and make up a story about walking into a door. No one would question her further. They didn't want to hear.

The kids were nervous wrecks and stayed away from home as much as they could. Their friends never came by. the visits and sleepovers always took place at the others' houses. The teachers had a pretty good idea to explain the dark circles or fatigue and trembling hand of the eleven year old. The younger one was always in trouble, picking fights in the NEVER, IN ALL MY seven or eight years, had I been dealt such a crushing blow. I was told I would probably never grow up to be a circus performer.

My dream was to be one of those women who dressed in a tutu and rode on the back of a horse, while the circus crowd went wild with applause. To a young girl, it was the culmination of several aspirations: to wear beautiful, feminine clothes and to work with horses.

But then I was told that most circus performers were born into it. My parents were not circus performers, ergo I would not be a circus performer. How could the fates be so cruel?

Now I know I wouldn't like circus life anyway and my priorities in life are somewhat different. But when I went to the circus in Stanhope on Saturday, part of me was still wondering what it would have been like if I had run away and joined the circus.

On the one hand, everyone becomes extended family, with each one looking after the other and willing to help. You make people happy when they come to see your show. The world—or at least the continent—is on your doorstep.

But there's no place you can really call your own. You're in a strange place every day and a lot of hard work goes into 1) setting up the tents and 2) perfecting your act. It takes a certain type of person to thrive on such a lifestyle, and I'm not one of them.

I tried to remember if I had ever been to circus before and I couldn't. If circuses were so important, then why wouldn't I remember going to one? The answer, or so it seems, stems from the fact that I MUST CALL JOAN HOAD someday soon. I need to know if she went through volunteer withdrawal. It's a rather curious phenomenon that is causing me more than a little consternations. It's hard to stop being president of the Guild of Fine Arts. It doesn't make sense. I mean, in the end, I was counting the days, as well as the events. And I distinctly remember Joan doing the same thing.

But after the last board meeting, during which I handed the gavel over to Pearl Foster, I drove home while my ego and my person became totally schizoid. Like I said, it's hard to suddenly stop being president.

Part of me was jubilant. I wouldn't have to answer empty-seven phone calls in the middle of my summer school classes. No more tricky problems to solve without ruffling feathers. No more meetings. That one fact opened this huge space on my calendar.

Plunk, plunk, plunk. "Hear that? Sounds just like The Beatles' Yesterday, doesn't it?" I ask earnestly. "How about this one?" Plunk, plunk, plunk. "That was A Hard Day's Night," I explain as eyes roll toward heaven. Screech, screech, screech. "Can't you even recognize Are You Experienced?" Perhaps my friends and family aren't familiar with Jimi Hendrix.

The room is cleared each time I pick up the guitar. Following a Grade 1 guitar method booklet, plucking away at the simplest tunes, my fingers are raw and unable to hold the sharp strings down so the

Joe Mancuso and Tom Eager go after Muskoka's ball

Short-handed senior soccer team loses to Muskoka, 4-2

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The short-handed Haliburton senior soccer team made a valiant effort in Sunday's game, but came up short, losing 4-2 to the Muskoka Inter squad. With only nine players showing up for the home game, the Haliburton team played an aggressive game and managed to hold back Muskoka's full line to a 1-0 lead at half-time.

In the second half they gave an extra push and Ivor Thompson scored on a penalty kick to tie up the game. On the second goal, Bill Wulleme took the ball down the field and took a shot on net. The goalie blocked the shot and Tom Eager pounded the rebound into the empty net giving Haliburton a 2-1 lead.

Haliburton's lead was short-lived, however. Ivor Thompson was suspended for 30 days after he punched a Muskoka player who had clipped him from behind. He will be out for the rest of the season, including the play-offs.

Muskoka capitalized on the loss of the Haliburton player and scored three more goals to win the game. However, team member Joe Mancuso is pleased with the team's performance despite the loss.

"We outplayed them, but they capitalized on their scoring chances and we didn't capitalize on ours," he says. "We had a lot of scoring opportunities. "Because we were short-handed we had to pass the ball a lot, which is good. There were less players so we had to let the ball do all of the work."

Play-offs start next Sunday with an away game in Bracebridge at 12:30 p.m. The team will take on the Bracebridge Centennials—a team they beat 3-0 the last time they met in regular season play.

The Haliburton junior soccer team jumped to an early lead against Orillia City on Sunday, but they were unable to hold on to it, and ended up losing 2-1.

Fifteen minutes into the game the juniors scored on an indirect kick from halfway up the field. Jerry Cooper passed the ball to Ryan Timbers who carried the ball up the field to Jan Haedicke who put the ball into the net.

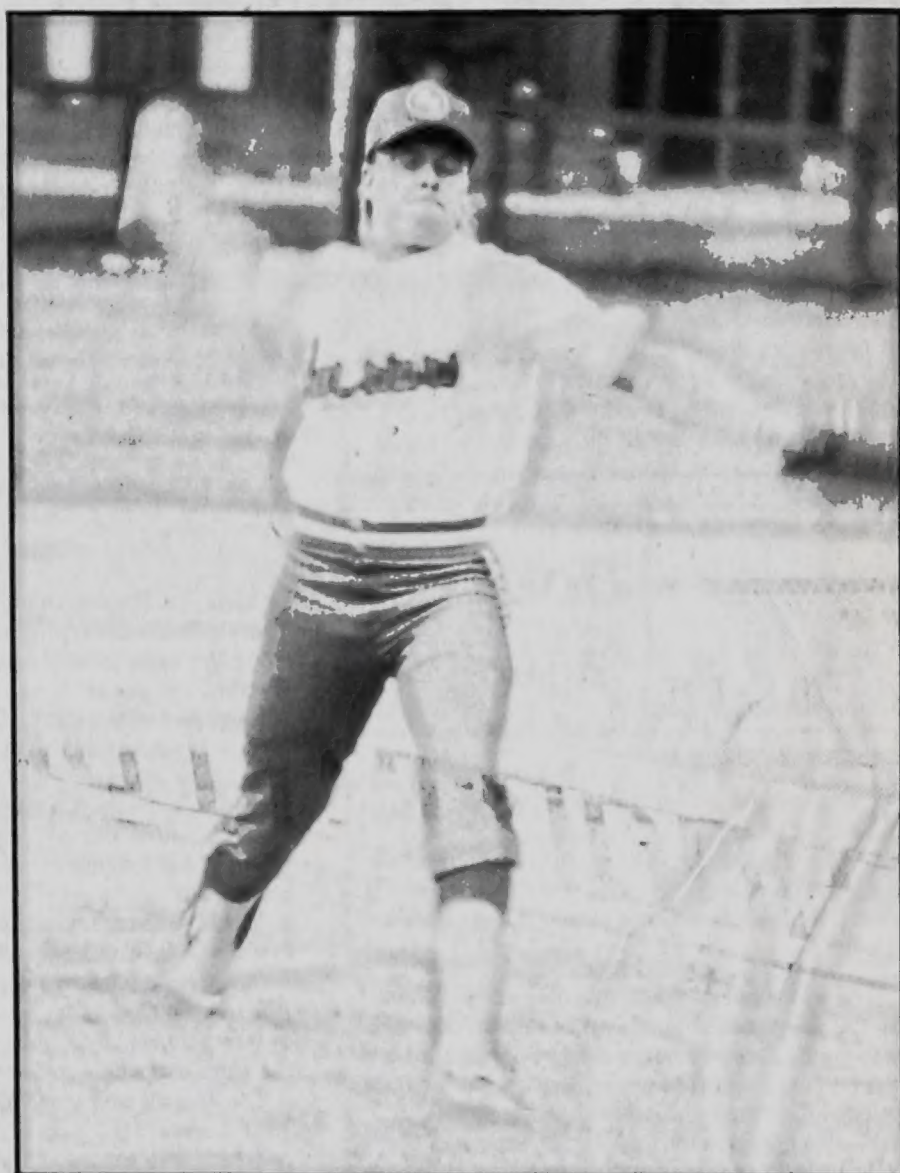

Minutes later Orillia tied up the game. Haliburton missed a chance to take the lead again when Haedicke missed a penalty shot, hitting the cross bar.

The score remained tied until well into the second half when Orillia scored again to take the game.

"We played pretty well, but we weren't as intense as we usually are," says Gerald Morrison, the manager of the junior team. "We've lost so many game that we've maybe started to give up a bit."

The junior team will take on the Orillia Inter squad in their first game of the play-offs on Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at Archie Stouffer Elementary School. Spectators are welcome.

Tran LaRue gets ready to let one fly in the semi-final game against Fenelon Falls on Tuesday.

Warriors have to win their next semi-final game or call it quits

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

If the Haliburton Warriors men's softball team doesn't win their next semi-final game, they'll have to call it quits for this year.

The team lost the second of the five game series to Fenelon Falls last Tuesday, 9-5. It was a close game until the last inning when Fenelon pulled ahead and captured the win.

Fenelon took a 2-0 lead in the first inning, but Minden closed the gap by scoring one in the second. Neither team managed to come home in the third.

The score was tied 3-3 by the end of the fourth inning after Andrew Burk hit a two-run homer. Fenelon had one home run in the fourth, but it wasn't enough to maintain their lead.

In the sixth inning Fenelon took the lead again with three runs to Haliburton's two. Another three in the seventh guaranteed them another win.

"We pulled (pitcher Tran LaRue) half way through the sixth inning and Erin (Nicholls) pitched for the seventh," says Coach Scott LaRue. "They seemed to be hitting off Erin a little more than they had been of Tran earlier."

"We had one man on base (in the seventh) and then three went out after that, so we never came back. They played an excellent game and it was close up until the last inning. Defensively they played errorless ball. But they're not getting the key hits when they need them."

The third game of the series will be tonight (Wednesday) in Fenelon Falls. If they lose this one they are out of the play-offs, but LaRue says the team is well practiced after a week-end tournament in Minden.

The Haliburton team lost the first game to Fenelon Falls, in an extra inning. The game was scoreless

First Hart Lodge tourney a smash

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

It was all fun and games at the first-ever Hart Lodge volleyball tournament on Wednesday.

Nine teams, made up of staff and guests from seven different lodges came out to partake in the festivities, sponsored by the Upper Canada Brewing Company.

"The weather co-operated and everyone came out and had a very good time," says Dan Thomson, the recreation director at Hart Lodge. "There was some fast-paced action."

The final game was very close with two evenly matched teams—Maple Sands and Sandy Lane—facing off. It was finally decided in the third game of a three game series, with Maple Sands winning the tournament and Sandy Lane placing second. Northern Eagle took the consolation round.

Other resorts that participated were Hart Lodge, Red Umbrella, Wig-a-mog, and Willow Beach cottages. Organizers are hoping to make the tournament an annual event.

Dan Thomson sets one up for Hart Lodge mates.

Drag Lake results

Drag Lake Property Owners continued their activities last weekend with sailing on Saturday and windsurfing on Sunday.

The four mile triangular sailing course started and finished off at Ken Wiseman's dock. Ten boats responded to the 1 o'clock start. Not as many as in other years as Camp Illahee is not operating. The breeze was gusty and the boats finished in 1 1/2 to 2 hours. The winner was the Lampinen cat in one hour, 29 minutes. Thorny Bailey beat the start and was disqualified, otherwise he would have won. Howard Vige was second and Lanny Totton third in the cats. In the wet boats Craig Martin was first and Al Ferguson second. Harold O'Halloron let the Albacores Leo Lampinen's 2nd boat was first in over 13'. Boats less than 13' were Marilyn Wilson 1st. and Wally Butz 2nd. Overall winner was the Lampinen Cat 1 hr. 29 minutes.

On Sunday a good breeze and many surfers did not materialize. Of those who participated Craig Turner was the winner by 4 seconds over Huw Morgan. Bill Klassen flying the Butz colours was third.

West Guilford women knocked out of playoffs by Minden team

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The West Guilford women's softball team were knocked out of play-off action by the Minden General Lee team last night with a 9-6 loss in the third of a three game series.

The team "lost it" in the first two innings. West Guilford was unable to score, but Minden had no problem bringing in five runs in the first and four in the second, giving them a commanding 9-0 lead. West Guilford came alive in the third, with two runners coming home. Another run in the fourth and three in the sixth gave them five points, but they needed another couple of innings to catch the General Lee team, which hadn't moved in the last five innings.

"In the first three innings we had trouble hitting off her (the General Lee pitcher)," says Melanie Duchene, a member of the West Guilford team. "After that we caught on and everyone was hitting."

The Minden General Lee team will face-off against the Minden Rockcliffe women in the final round of the play-offs. The Rockcliffe team eliminated Haliburton after two semi-final games.

Heineken Yard off to slick start as rain ends just in time for race at the bottom of the seventh, and Fenelon pulled in four runs in the eighth inning. Haliburton only managed one run.

by SUSAN GROBER

On Saturday they beat the Toronto City Bank team 7-2, followed by a 9-2 win over the Huntsville team on Sunday morning. They lost their final game 2-0 to the Toronto Royals in the consolation round.

With four extra practice games under their belt the team is "confident they can beat Fenelon Falls", and are expecting an exciting game.

Haliburton women end season with 7-3 loss to Rockcliffe team

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton women's softball team finished off their season with a 7-3 loss to Rockcliffe in the second game of the semi-finals.

At the game last Wednesday in Minden, the team was not able to rally in time. They scored one run in the second inning, but couldn't put another runner across home plate until the last inning of the game.

The Rockcliffe women played a steady game bringing home one or two runs in each of the first six innings, to win the game.

While it means the end of the softball year for the Haliburton women, they were pleased with the level of play.

"The team played really well," says Betty Whiteway, a team member. "It was a good game for both teams, but we didn't get the hits. It started climbing in the seventh, but it wasn't enough."

"We could have done better (in the season). Our batting was off and we lost our star pitcher and then our second and third basemen, so we had to regroup. But our last game was one of the best of the whole season."

The Rockcliffe team will take on the Minden General Lee squad in the play-offs.

Percy Lake ratepayers meet

Submitted

President Gord Benner welcomed 60 cottagers and guests to the 8th annual general meeting of the Percy Lake Ratepayer's Association on Saturday August 5.

Following the business portion of the meeting, Vice-President Henry Dykstra introduced Constable Mike Maybee, O.P.P. Public Relations Officer for the Minden detachment, who spoke on several cottage-related issues. Maybee filled questions from the audience concerning cottage security, misuse of alcohol, licensing of motorized vehicles and boating safety requirements.

Director Sylvia Winder reported on the relentless efforts of the telephone committee to bring service to the area and advised the members that the anticipated date for installation is the spring of 1990.

Director Anna Tilman raised a number of environmental concerns pertinent to the Percy Lake residents. She addressed the issues of pollution associated with transient campers, fire permits and the hazardous burning of refuse, proper disposal of garbage at landfill sites and bathing in the lake. The "Cottage Country Environmental Manual" from the M.O.E., as well as various other pamphlets and publications, were made available to those present.

The 1988 "Fish Awards" were presented by director Dave Lindsay to Angie Dykstra and Max Boyd for the largest fish in the Youth Bass category and to David Keating for the Adult Bass category.

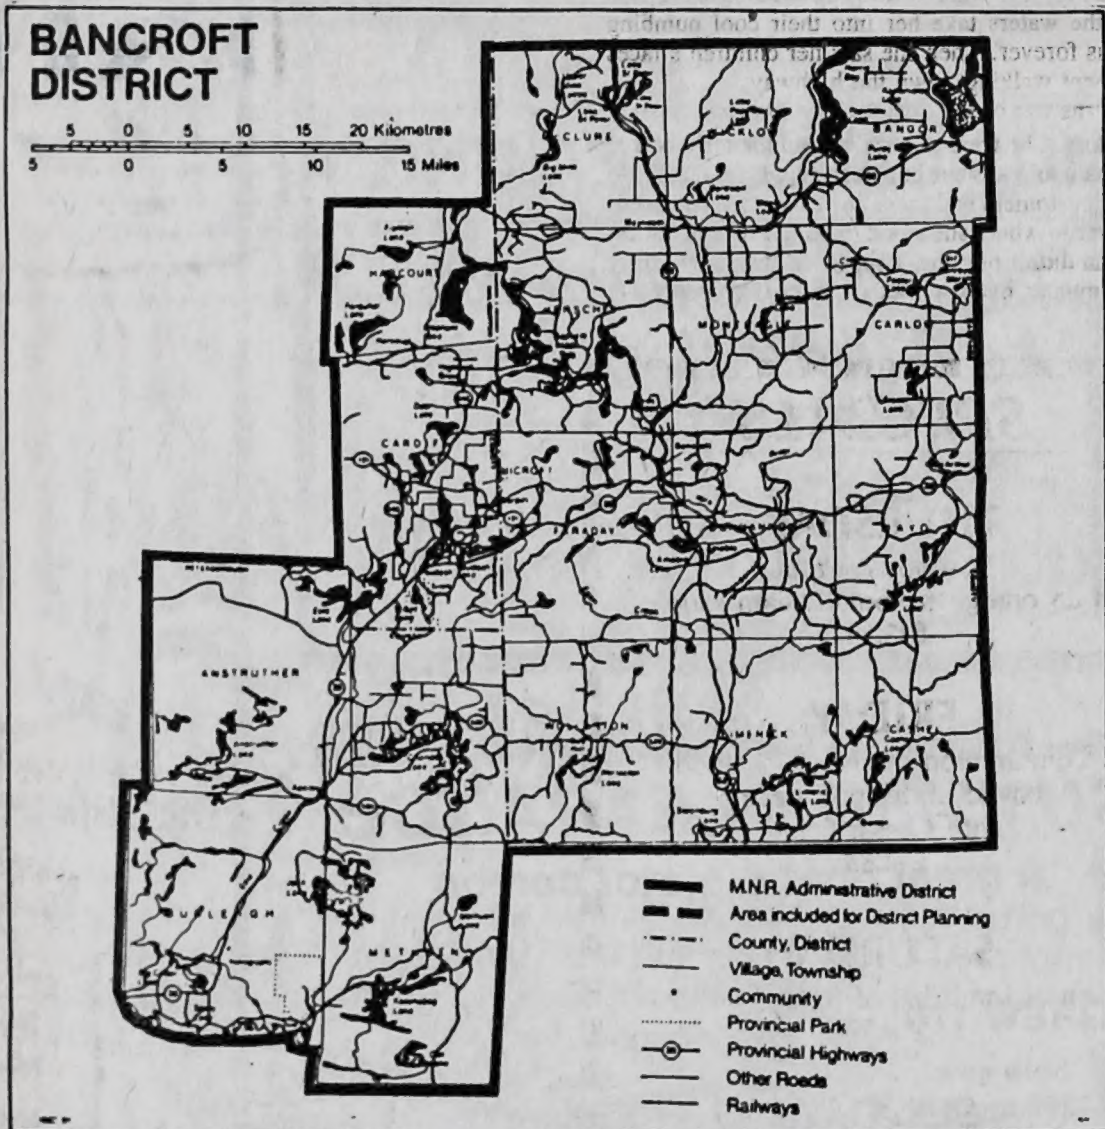

The 1989-91 executive, as introduced by past president Jim Shephard, is as follows: Past President—Gord Benner, President Henry Dykstra, Vice-President—Sylvia Winder, Secretary/Treasurer—Dennis Woodbridge, Directors—Bernard Boyd, Richard Graesser, Dave Lindsay, Ian Metcalf, Jim Shephard, Anna Tilman.

Gord Benner wrapped up the meeting by thanking Marlene Shephard and Susan Lindsay for their preparation of the cheese and fruit trays for the social to follow.

PUBLIC INSPECTION OF THE DRAFT (1990-2010) BANCROFT TIMBER MANAGEMENT PLAN

The Ministry of Natural Resources has prepared the Draft Timber Management Plan 1990-2010, Bancroft District, subject to a thirty-day public inspection period.

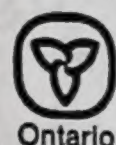

The Draft Timber Management Plan outlines the objectives and strategies for the management of timber resources situated within the Bancroft Crown Management Unit. The Draft Plan describes the potential area for timber harvest and renewal, and as well describes the secondary road corridors for the twenty-year period from 1990-2010. Specific information regarding harvest, renewal, maintenance, access, and areas of concern are outlined in detail for the first five-year term (1990-1995). The Draft Plan also addresses the concerns of other resource users of the forest.

You are invited to inspect the Draft Timber Management Plan and Supplementary Documentation at the Bancroft District Office of the Ministry of Natural Resources, Highway 28S, Bancroft, Ontario, during a thirty day period commencing September 15, 1989 through until October 15, 1989.

Any group or individual having concerns regarding the Draft Timber Management Plan are asked to submit their written comments by October 15, 1989 to the following address: District Manager, Ministry of Natural Resources, P.O. Box 500, Bancroft, Ontario K0L 1C0.

Additional information with respect to the Timber Management Plan, the planning process, can be obtained by contacting Mr. Bruce Fleck, Management Forester, at (613) 332-3940.

THIS WEEK

Working women have to balance all facets of life

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

Working women must learn how to keep themselves "both physically and mentally intact," given all the pressures they face, a group of women—and a handful of men—were told at a recent "Balancing Home and Work" seminar.

"You are a self. You were an individual before you married your spouse, before you had your children, before you got your job," said Dr. Lyz Sayer, a Toronto psychologist and career consultant. "You have to take care of that person."

Dr. Sayer's speech was sponsored by Sir Sandford Fleming College's Child Worker Assistant Program and was held at the PineStone Inn on August 3.

In this changing world, where both men and women work outside the home, our expectations and government policies must also reflect these changes, Dr. Sayer said.

"Women need more than equality if they are to attain equal earning power in the marketplace. They need job-protected maternity leave, child care flex time and specially tailored career ladders."

"For a man, his identity is based on whether he works and how well he does his work. All other roles are secondary—as provider and spending time occasionally with the children. There's a segregation of work and family responsibility." This too much change for the benefit of men and women.

Often a man comes to this conclusion himself when he hits his "mid-life crisis." The man who was always working when his children were growing up, now wants to start all over with a new (younger) wife. His second family becomes his centre of attention. Meanwhile, women at that age are wanting to break free of family ties and concentrate on their careers. This leads to a high percentage of divorce among couples married between 18 to 20 years. "It's a period of re-evaluation and re-committing to a marriage."

How couples deal with this is very important, and communication skills are of the essence if a marriage is to survive the transitions. Perceptions of the other's actions or intentions can be skewed and part of Dr. Sayer's job is to help people learn coping skills which allow them to deal with their partner, and any resulting stresses.

"Isn't adult life about uncertainty," she asked. "There may not be a right and a wrong so there's tolerance."

Dr. Sayer then focused on specific skills people can use to deal with stress and relationships. While doing so, she reminded people that when they think of what they want to achieve in life, "perfection is an unrealistic and self-defeating goal."

ordeal, they did have to lessen their services. A temporary office was set up in Valm's house, and the community centre was used as a drop-in centre. Others were channelled to the Minden branch of the organization.

Now the only thing left to get back in operation is the equipment rental service. Because the cost of replacing the cribs, carseats, and playpens was so high, the budget would not allow for it. Valm says she now has to wait for an advance in their insurance to purchase the equipment. They will then be made available for rental on a weekly or monthly basis depending on the need.

Everyone involved with the organization is excited to see it back in the original building. "When the moving truck came everyone was laughing and excited," says Valm.

"It's a real relief to have it back and running, and it is comforting to have everything back in its place.

"Our thanks to all the people who worked so hard pulling it all together."

CHACE Place will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday for any parents that wish to drop by with their children.

Lower limit on Highland Road

Drivers along Highland Road in Stanhope Township will now have to slow down to 40 km/h.

At last Wednesday's meeting, councillors agreed with Marilyn Freure, who said the present 60 km/h speed limit was too fast. She says she often goes walking on that road and it's "frightening to see cars careening around a bend."

The new speed limit will come into effect as soon as council receives the signs.

Bluegrass festival and fun:

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

MUSIC FANS FROM ALL OVER Ontario came in droves to camp out at Glebe Park for some toe-tapping fun at the Fourth Annual Bluegrass Festival this weekend.

Presented by the Haliburton Legion Branch 129, a wide-variety of bluegrass bands came with fiddles, banjos, and guitars in hand to pick and twang until dark.

Opening Friday evening with Appalachian Express, the festival also featured the Taylor Family, White Water Bluegrass, Maple Hill, Grassworks, Silver Birch, Haldimand County Line, and the Dixie Flyers.

The headlining band, the New Coon Creek Girls from Kentucky, is no stranger to pleasing a crowd, having played twice at the Grand Old Opry. The band brought down-home earthy charm to the stage by singing lines such as "I love my man and I love my baby/I love my biscuits sopped in gravy."

With members aged 12 to 45, the Step In Time Cloggers from Durham Region kicked, clicked, stomped and yipped their way into the hearts of audience members. Having previously performed in New York, North Carolina and all across Ontario,

Crowds gather at Glebe Park for a stompin' and rompin' good time in November the 12-member cloggers will play at the Opryland Hotel in Nashville, Tennessee.

Most bands had tapes and souvenirs for sale. The legion's bluegrass festival T-Shirt was so popular it was sold out early on Saturday.

While the scheduled bands were playing, a number of amateurs diligently practised for Saturday's talent contest. Jim Cadieux of Stouffville, a cottager on Little Kennis Lake, won the $100 first prize playing country musician George Jones' Grand Tour on his guitar. "It's a country song, but I can't really play bluegrass music by myself," says Cadieux.

"You need the banjos and fiddles to play bluegrass."

When a few drops of rain fell earlier that day, some packed up their blankets, lawnchairs and coolers early to run for shelter, despite Gerry Irish's promise to perform a rain dance (Irish co-ordinated the event along with Jim Tice).

Still, a little rain wasn't going to dampen the spirits of the true-blue bluegrass fan. The bands played on and most onlookers just hiked up their umbrellas and settled back in their chairs, clapping their hands, stamping their feet and singing along with the music.

Chamber of Commerce is gearing up for busy winter

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

With the summer rush drawing to a close, the Chamber of Commerce is busy making plans and preparing local business people for the winter season.

"Winter is not so much an off season now," says Chamber Manager, Shirley Rapson. "It has become comparable to summer. By mid-August we start having requests for winter material. So in our busiest time we are still organizing our more long term plans, helping to make sure the fall and winter season will be busy as well."

To help lure people to the Haliburton Highlands, the Chamber will be participating in three fall/winter shows—the London Free Press, Toronto Ski and Markham Snowmobile Shows. A booth will be set up at the events, and local accommodation owners are welcome to attend or send brochures.

The shows start in September and run throughout the fall. In addition to the shows the Chamber is attending, there are others across Canada and the United States. Unfortunately time and money does not allow the Chamber to attend them all, says Rapson, who adds that the three shows which would reach the this area's desired market were chosen.

Would-be vacationers often attend the shows to browse around the booths from the various regions. The people working the booths will answer any questions, and extol the virtues of the Haliburton Highlands.

"People do like the shows," says Rapson. "They go around to all the booths, talk to people about the region, pick up the brochures, and go home to decide about their vacation."

"The competition for the travel dollar is fierce. Not only is there the sophistication of the other displays, there are also more regions represented than there used to be."

It is therefore important that resorts participate in the shows and work to sell the area, says Rapson. The more information Haliburton County has to offer, the better it will be for business.

"Those who aren't in the marketplace will lose out," she says. "It is absolutely essential that they are there to represent Haliburton County as an entity. And the only way to do that is to show the world what we have... this fine accommodation, lodge to lodge skiing, the largest snowmobile club, a network of trails throughout the county. If we don't let the world know about these things then there isn't going to be anyone staying overnight in the resorts."

"The travelling public looks for a reason to go to an area. They need to have something to draw them there, as well as knowing there is a variety of accommodation to suit everyone's needs. From one end of the spectrum to the other—the simplest to the most extravagant tastes. We can meet them here in Haliburton County."

More and more accommodation owners have been participating in the shows each year, and Rapson says the quality of the literature is also improving. Colour is starting to make an appearance in the brochures, which she says is essential if they want people to pick them up.

"Attractive material is picked up," says Rapson. "That's no secret to people in the advertising business. It is expensive to promote, but it is essential in order to inform, encourage, and lure people to stay at the resorts."

"And at all the shows our material goes very quickly. That says to me that what we are promoting and publicizing is something people are eager to find out about."

In addition to the individual brochures the Chamber also hands out a Haliburton Highlands winter map. Included on the publication is a listing of the accommodations and their facilities, a guide to upcoming events, information on the snowmobiling trails and lodge to lodge skiing, as well as a map of the area and the trails.

"It makes it easy for people to respond to us," says Rapson. "It is not throw out material. It complements the Nordic Trail and snowmobile association maps, and I think it is working beautifully. Whatever there is to lure people here, they are going to know about it."

However, in order to get all of the information onto the map, and into the show, Rapson warns that businesses have to co-operate and get their information ready as soon as possible.

"It is essential to have the information early and get it into the people's hands when they are keen to make plans," she says. "If we don't have that information we can't respond as effectively or immediately. And if we don't respond, someone else will."

Haliburton County is becoming a popular winter vacation spot for many people in the Toronto area, and Rapson says people at the shows are telling her they want to return here instead of asking where Haliburton is. She says part of the reason for the county's popularity is its proximity to Toronto.

"People can come often, and it's not an all day trip," she says. "Road conditions make it possible to come Friday evening and still have a sense of holiday. And they have a good experience and then tell other people about it."

With exposure through word of mouth and the fall shows, Rapson hopes the Haliburton Highlands will be on the top of the list of places to spend a winter vacation.

Haliburton's minor hockey association is more than $6,000 in debt, but one illustrious graduate of the system has decided to help do something about it. L.A. Kings superstar Bernie Nicholls has donated more than 80 tee shirts celebrating his record breaking 70 goal season, to minor hockey, and proceeds from the sale of the shirts will help reduce the deficit. Here, minor hockey president Brian Foster and his son Blaze sport the shirts which Nicholls, right, has donated. Foster praised Nicholls' generosity. "He's a great young man. He's more than willing to help us in any way he can" Foster said. The association hopes to eliminate the deficit without going back to the business community continually for financial assistance.

Lot levy increase changed

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A 500 per cent increase in lot levies for serviced properties in Anson, Hindon and Minden townships will only apply on newly-created lots, not existing lots as previously decided by council.

The matter was brought up at last Thursday's meeting during a discussion on the Planning Advisory Committee (PAC) meeting minutes. Council had agreed to collect the increased levies on new lots when a severance application is underway, and to charge a levy on existing lots during the application for any building permits.

But councillor Bob Sisson, who first suggested the increase to $1,000, said it wasn't his intention that levies be charged to existing lots.

Previously, a $200 levy was charged on each new serviced residential or commercial lot. Under recommendations by PAC, which had been looking at other municipalities' levies, that amount was increased to $1,000—$200 for administration, $200 for parks, $300 for roads and $300 for water and sewer.

Levies for waterfront lots also increased to $1,000, while levies for rural properties increased to $400, with money from these charges used toward parks and administration.

Councillor Lewis Stevens was concerned such high lot levies may discourage multi-lot developments in the municipality. "If someone is proposing a 100-lot development, does that mean they have to pay $100,000 up front? That's a pretty stiff fee on developers."

"I hope we don't price ourselves out of the developer's field by asking too great an amount of money," Reeve Ray Moore agreed, saying most municipalities will adjust their levies when a group of 25 or more lots is being developed.

The levy should be charged when each lot is sold, he said. Moore also suggested that the whole process might be altered if the Board of Education starts receiving lot levy money, now that the provincial government has cut back its funding.

"We'll have to collect that money, and we don't have too much to say about that," he said.

Wheelbus committee receives transportation grant of $30,000

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The Committee for Equal Access has received a $30,000 grant from the provincial government for the purchase of a wheelbus.

The local group had approached the government before starting a fundraising campaign. They were notified that the Ministry of Transportation would fund half of the capital cost of the $60,000 bus. And now that they have the guarantee in writing, the group will go ahead with a full-scale fundraising drive, says Peggie Neville, the committee chairperson.

Approximately $5,000 has already been donated towards the cost of the bus, which would hold six passengers in wheelchairs and six seated passengers. It will be equipped with a hydraulic lift to raise the chairs into the bus, and will allow people who cannot use other forms of transportation to get out of their homes to go shopping, visiting, to the doctor, or to church.

A specific bus has not been decided on, but the committee has received tenders from eight different companies, and narrowed the choice down to four different vehicles, all of which are in the $60,000 range. They group would like to see all of the buses before making a decision.

Proper disposal supported

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A resolution by Howick Township demanding proper disposal of pesticide and herbicide containers has been supported by Stanhope council members.

At last Wednesday's meeting, council accepted a letter sent to clerks of all rural Ontario municipalities. Howick clerk-treasurer Tom Miller states: pesticide and herbicide containers are not returnable or recyclable; the burying of pesticide and herbicide containers require large volumes of scarce landfill site area; and the residue in pesticide and herbicide containers may contaminate ground water.

The letter requests that municipalities petition the provincial government to "enact legislation requiring all chemical companies to provide for the return of and recycling of pesticide and herbicide containers."

An endorsement of the resolution will be sent to Jim Bradley, Minister of the Environment, Premier David Peterson, official opposition leader Bob Rae and the Association of Municipalities of Ontario (AMO).

Anson, Hindon and Minden July council meeting briefs

At a meeting July 27, Anson, Hindon and Minden council considered the following matters:

Reeve Ray Moore presented to John Hulbig and Gord Samells, plaques and personalized gifts on behalf of the Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden and the Haliburton County Ambulance Service for their many years of dedication to Haliburton County.

Bill Stackhouse, representing the Lions Club, requested Council's permission to hold a Santa Claus parade on Saturday, December 16, 1989. The club will require a permit and also some financial assistance. Bill also explained that he will be meeting with the B.I.A. to discuss the parade and will also be getting in touch with the other clubs to be involved.

Jim Webster was present, on behalf of Mrs. Erika Bradmore requesting Council's approval of Severance H-370/89. Deputy Reeve Bern Berry quoted Section 50 (2) of the Planning Act concerning the entrance to the sub-division.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

government that introduced de-indexation could not be trusted. To reassure voters, Prime Minister Mulroney promised that his government would improve pensions not degrade them. So why not index Government personnel pensions. Also! Let government parties take cut backs in wages and leave pensions alone, think about it.

Once Feds get their fingers in your pie watch out. With the reduction of real income level at which the tax kicks in, more seniors will have to pay more money. The numbers of seniors will be increasing as Canadians age. A large number of seniors will be caught in the net. What we have is the government's betrayal of public trust.

Let's not be bashful fellow Canadians. Please write you M.P. and let your voices be heard loud and clear. Enough is enough, How much are we going to take? If other countries can let their voices be heard why can't we, so join me in writing a letter, please. If there is a need for the government to increase taxation, then it should apply to all similar levels of income on the same basis, including the affluent of all ages and not just seniors.

Senior Canadians have earned every cent of any social benefit coming to them. Seniors do not deserve to be taxed at a high rate than younger persons with the same total incomes. New burdens cannot be absorbed by low-income seniors who are already struggling to remain in their homes. They have a right to expect more and also some respect of this great country of ours.

Respectfully yours,

Marie Anthony
Haliburton, Ontario.

Councillor Bob Sisson stated that council have not seen any plan of sub-division. Also, both Councillors Bob Sisson and Mike Maher stated that it seems this sub-division is being chipped away; and they also have concerns about the house behind these proposed severances. Deputy Reeve Bern Berry also stated that no report from Bob Lehman has been received concerning the severances or sub-division. Jim Webster stated that a formal request from Council must be submitted to Mr. Lehman to get this report.

After further discussion, Council agreed that these plans be taken back to Planning Advisory Committee on August 2 if the agenda has not been prepared. the clerk will check with the building department secretary concerning this matter and Jim Webster will be notified.

Dr. Gordon Smith was present to further his concerns about spraying of weeds. Dr. Smith stated that parks manager Ivan Ingram was spraying poison ivy at the Twelve Mile Beach and there was no posting of this anywhere at the site.

Dr. Smith requested that Council set up a policy for weed control in the municipality or possibly a volunteer Environmental Advisory Committee comprised of one or two representatives of Council and the balance from volunteers, to a total of six to seven members. Deputy Reeve Bern Berry said council will restrict employees from using such sprays and he requested that Dr. Smith forward some material to the parks manager.

Ray Moore said a Council had no problem in Dr. Smith starting the committee and bringing the ideas and material to Council.

Council agreed that if any planning application cheques are returned for non-sufficient funds, all rezoning or amendments will be put on hold until the applicant forwards a deposit of $1500 by certified cheque or cash to cover costs as are incurred and these funds will be refurbished when required by the municipality.

The hourly rate of pay for the Secretary/Receptionist was increased by $1 to amount of $9.00/per hour effective immediately with full benefits and the probation period be cancelled.

The probation period for the Deputy-Clerk/Treasurer was cancelled immediately with no wage consideration at this time.

Council approved the Park Manager Ivan Ingram's recommendation to increase the wages for Peter Allore to $8 per hour effective July 3, 1989.

Council approved the Chief Operator Gene Newell's recommendation to increase the wages for Duane Lennie to $10/hour effective July 16, 1989 with full benefits.

Council agreed to purchase an air conditioner for the Library Cultural Centre at a maximum cost $5,000.

The Road Superintendent was authorized to complete the necessary work along the roadside by Lot 20, Conc. 10, Township of Minden and Annie Miscio's property.

Reeve Ray Moore said the County will be doing something about the Horseshoe Lake Road for next year. Bill Obee will be answering the letter to the Property Owners Association.

Hydro tries non-pesticide spray

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

In an effort to cut down on herbicide use, Ontario Hydro forestry crews are using "hydroseeding" to control unwanted vegetation.

Water is mixed with seeds, fertilizer and mulch, and applied with a high-pressure gun to the land under hydro power lines. This combination of grass and other seeds will hopefully grow into a cover crop that smothers and slows the growth of unwanted vegetation, says Minden's Forestry Supervisor, Al Cheesman.

"We're in the experimental stage here, using different grasses to see which works best," he says. "It's a whole new program for us, and we don't know exactly where we're going with it yet. We don't know which seeds will spread out the best. We're going to try one thing today, and tomorrow we'll try something else."

Hydroseeding was recently done on Highway 121, just north of Tory Hill, where a mixture of five different grasses and clovers was applied to vegetation under three kilometres of power line in that area.

Normally, herbicides would be used to control the vegetation, but last year Ontario Hydro made a commitment to reduce the use of such chemical by 35 per cent.

Herbicides are still used for stump spraying, away from cottage areas, where power lines cross. After brush is cut, the stumps are sprayed to prevent any suckers from growing. "It helps to get rid of the root system."

Cheesman says the procedure will be tried again this fall to see what type of cover crop is most efficient and how much re-growth can be expected.

In addition to hydroseeding, a mechanical brush cutter is scheduled for use in the Minden area as another method to control vegetation.

Daring trapeze acts, popcorn and peanuts, elephants and doves, hustle and hucksters are all a part of the Kelly Miller Three Ring Circus which came to Stanhope

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

BEFORE ANYONE PACKS their bags, let it be known that not many people who run away to join the circus stick it out for more than a week or two. The mystique soon evaporates when you're given a pitch fork and wheelbarrow and pointed towards the less picturesque end of an elephant. Or when your job is to hoist up the big top spotlights, not bask in applause underneath them.

Circuses are nine parts hard work and one part showmanship (and when showmanship means walking upside down 10 metres above the ground, that part's not necessarily easy either). The hours are long, the pace unforgiving and, if you're one of the performers, the glamour isolated to five-minute forays into the three rings. Forget the glamour altogether if you're one of the crew.

But yes, Virginia, people do really run off to join the circus. And some of them stay because they can imagine no other life.

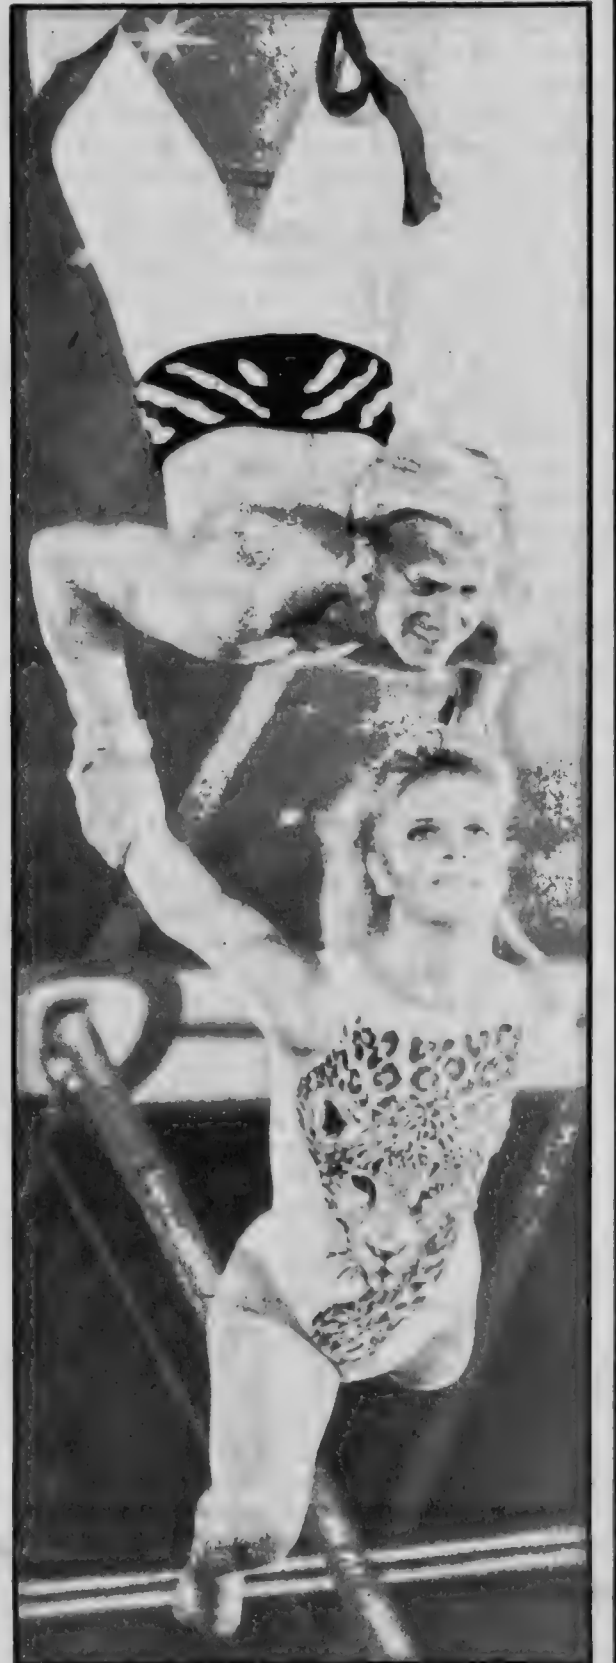

On October 6, 1979, David Haslett ran away from home and joined the circus. You don't ask for more details when he answers your first question—why—by looking you straight in the eye and replying "because I didn't like home." Obviously the important thing was to get out of the house and the circus was an afterthought. When you ask why the circus was his destination, he asks "Why the city?"

The work's not really that hard, he says. "All I do is pick up shit all day." He's not being facetious, or overtly rude either, when he describes his work in such terms.

After moving from circus to circus, Haslett has settled in with the Kelly Miller Circus operation. On Saturday, he and about 65 other employees set up their tents in the park behind the Stanhope Firefighters' Hall. The Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce had agreed to sponsor the circus and for the next few hours, Stanhope was to be its home.

At about 7:30 in the morning, Haslett and the elephant trainer push several stakes into the ground. One each side of a stake, they swing their iron mallets in a wide arc above their heads and clang. The first strike is hesitant, but once they have their bearings, the rhythmic pounding provides the morning's music. Shouts, some of them in Spanish, laughter and the metal hitting metal are heard throughout the grounds.

Once the stakes are driven half a metre into the earth, Nina, Viola and Brittany are allowed out of the truck. (You'd never know such an average-looking truck could house three elephants and a stable of ponies.) Excited about being let outside, Nina trumpets loudly to Viola, who's still inside and responds with gusto. Tarzan and Jane do not miraculously appear, but Viola lets loose a steady torrent of urine which washes down the floor of the truck, and the two men standing next to her. This is not a job for people who like to be clean all the time.

Nina is a 20-year-old Indian elephant. Viola, who's slightly bigger, is a few years younger and Brittany is the baby, a six-year-old African elephant.

Circus acts daring, funny crowd-pleasers

(An elephant's average lifespan is 65 years.) Haslett asks them to lift up a foot so he can place a chain around their leg. Without winking an eyelid, these large, lumbering animals, which could easily crush Haslett in an instant, comply. Haslett asks them to move forward, they move forward. He asks them to move over, they move over. Elephants, Haslett says, are very smart.

"You can have an intelligent conversation with them and you're always right and they don't talk back," he says of what really keeps him with the circus. "It ain't the money."

Are elephants really afraid of mice? "Elephants are afraid of things they can't identify. I've never seen Nina get scared but she gets spooked by thunder."

Haslett bristles when the conversation turns to animal abuse. Yes, some circuses do abuse their animals, but not Kelly Miller, he says. One circus was closed down because of the way the animals were treated and Haslett believes that the reason why Nina, his favourite, treats him as a friend is "she knows I won't hurt her."

Animals shouldn't be used for research testing—"just let them live"—but he has no qualms about Nina acting like a drunken sailor in the show twice a day. "Animal rights people think it's inhuman to use animals to make money. It's how I live. The elephants have got to work for their food just like we do."

Suspensions arise when Haslett gives Nina an injection, just under her trunk. Steroids? Tranquillizers? Probably antibiotics. It turns out Nina has an abscessed tusk and Haslett thinks a lot of tender, loving care will save her from the fate suffered by the Metro Zoo's male elephant. He died when he was operated on for the same malady.

There's also an economic reason why animals aren't abused, Haslett and others will point out to you. Nina would cost upwards of $100,000 to replace and India and Africa have stopped exporting elephants, making them very difficult to find.

Long, hard hours

"People don't last long if they mistreat animals. If the animals don't work, the people don't work," says Paul Parsons, a clown who ran away (if that's what you can call immigrating) from Canada and joined the circus. And as far as abusing animals to get them to do tricks goes, Parsons says "if an animal doesn't want to do something, it won't."

Parsons takes circus life seriously; he even takes clowning seriously and teaches workshops. On this tour, he's left his clown costume behind and acts as the front man, making sure everything goes smoothly.

"What you see is the five minutes in the spotlight and that's what we want you to see—the five hours of hard work is not necessary for you to see," he says. Behind the glitter and the flashy smiles are committed professionals, who thrive on the audience's applause.

"I love it," Parsons says of what it's like to perform. "I love the reaction from people; that's worth more than anything else. You have to work hard, but it's fun. It doesn't feel like work, but in order to make it work, it is. Granted when you give two performances a day, seven days a week, there are days when it can seem like a job.

"But I lose myself in the character. Everything else is behind me and we let the audience forget their cares and problems too."

Clowns have to be very careful with young children, he says, because there's a 50/50 chance a four-year-old will burst into tears if a clown comes too close. For the most part though, children love to see a "big" person act as silly as they do, and get in trouble too. "Here's a person bigger than them who knows less than them. Clowns get in there and do things kids know are silly and not done properly. You act to the kids—you just take it down to a basic level."

One misconception about clowns is that underneath all those exaggerated smiles and wide-open eyes are sad people. "Most clowns I know are happy people," Parsons counters. "When you step into the ring, everything is forgotten."

Once, two minutes before he had to perform, he was told his grandmother had died. For that show, people did see a truly sad clown—one who wished he could have been told at a more opportune time—but the show must go on.

Circus life like a family

But what's it like, moving from town to town; working and living with the same people, day in, day out? Most people can go home at the end of the day, but circus workers have no other place to go.

"We're home right now—it will just be in a different location tomorrow," Parsons says.

"It's like a family, we look out for each other," says drummer Duane "Dewey" Welch, 63, who was quite a big kid when he ran away from home and joined the circus.

"I owned a supermarket for 24 years but ever since I was a kid, I wanted to be a drummer. A few years ago I took a couple of days off and saw a circus which had a sign saying 'Musicians Wanted.'"

That was all the encouragement he needed. The store was sold, his house was sold and all those responsibilities were forgotten as soon as he picked up his sticks and started to play.

"I can sit and play an act and the tent can fall in, I won't notice it," Welch says, his speech becoming faster once he realizes he's the one in the spotlight for a few minutes. Not for him could taped music ever suffice, as it does at some circuses. This is a passion.

"I love it. You meet a different class of people, very friendly... When I go back to my trailer in Hugo (Oklahoma, where the circus is based), there's no grass to mow, no Uncle Sam taking all my money. All I have to do is play the drums."

"It's not for everybody, though."

Sitting next to Welch and Parsons in an open trailer leading into the "big top" is a large, content man, whose smile is as broad as his Alabama accent. Ralph Faulk quietly listens to the voices around him, including that of the nearby ringmaster, practicing his spiel about peanuts.

Despite his 60 years, Faulk is like a boy again when he talks about life in the circus. Being here, with all these circus people, travelling from town to town, is a long-held dream come true. You can almost see him pinching himself to make sure it's all real.

He remembers that he was six when he first realized he wanted to join the circus. But home wasn't such a bad place so he stayed put, faithfully improving his musical talents. High school ended in 1938 and you guessed it, he immediately joined the circus. Unfortunately, World War II got started around the same time and Faulk signed up with the air force band.

War—even if you're not fighting in it—has a way of turning boys into men and when the war was over, Faulk thought the more mature thing to do was get a job with the telephone company. For 30 years, he helped people reach out and touch someone, but never in the way he himself wanted to reach out to others.

On March 16, 1989, he got his wish. Retired from the company for three years, he had applied for a job at Kelly Miller. "I still did not have this out of my system," he says.

Since he knew circuses didn't need reed instrument players, he switched from clarinet to trumpet and was hired. Or, as he puts it, the circus management "allowed" him to play.

"I felt like it was a gift," he says, his accent perhaps adding extra youthfulness to his voice. "After all these years, it was a dream come true. It's really better than I thought, it's been tremendous."

At this point, however, Faulk, Welch and Parsons must excuse themselves because, it's show time.

Show time

The lineup of children and adults quickly pours into the big top where Parsons is there to greet them.

"Best seats in the house, right here in front of centre ring," he yells for a few minutes until it becomes "Best seats in the house, right here in front of the right ring."

A drum roll please, Mr. Welch, and ta-da, here's the ringmaster, his voice smooth and slick, welcoming everyone. Barely taking a moment's pause, he tells everyone about this special peanut deal. Prizes can be won, hunger can be appeased, on your mark, get set, buy, buy, buy.

(There is definitely hustle in with all the bustle. Not a minute goes by when there isn't someone in front of you, urging you to buy pop, candy apples, balloon toys, colouring books. And when their hands are empty, the hucksters clutch their money bags and dash towards the concession stand at full speed to stock up again. Without a second of money-making potential to be lost—do they work on commission?—they're back with something new.)

Another drum roll and here's Stanhope councillor Murray Daniels acting as the honorary ringmaster, welcoming everyone to his fair township. "Sit down," someone yells in jest. "You mean you don't want to listen to a political speech," asks Daniels, whose political predecessors had no qualms about putting on a little show to get votes.

The circus begins with aerial acrobatics. They don't do gymnastics like this in the Olympics. Suspended 10 metres above the ground, the two women couple suspense with displays of grace and amazing agility. Everyone oohs and aahs as the performers contort their bodies into seemingly impossible positions while hanging from ropes. Later on, one of the women will return with her husband. He hangs upside down with a rope around his neck. It's attached to a rope around her neck and she dangles in the air for a few moments before spinning around like a top. Rightside up, the pair beams at the audience, a bit red in the face but with smiles firmly in place.

The next couple to appear also display an incredible amount of confidence in each other. Whip cracking, Bobbie Fairchild dashes into right ring. His wife Sonya follows and nonchalantly holds a newspaper in front of her. Crack!, the paper is split in two. Crack! it's a little bit smaller. Crack! until there's barely anything else.

If that's not enough, she allows him to throw knives at her—when he's blindfolded. She doesn't even blink as the sharp metal edges embed themselves in the wood next to her.

During the intermission, Mrs. Fairchild will tell you she's not the least bit scared during the act. Doesn't every wife allow her husband to throw knives at her?

"If I didn't trust myself, I wouldn't do it," says Mr. Fairchild, who practiced for a year before he asked his wife to stand in front of him. "It's all timing."

The Fairchilds are that other breed of circus performers, the ones who are born into it. His parents travelled with a carnival, she's the fourth generation circus performer and if their two-and-a-half-year-old daughter's enthusiasm is anything to go by, there will be a fifth generation performer as well. (Their 10-month-old son has yet to learn that most fathers don't throw knives at their wives unless they're deadly serious.)

"I'm certainly not going to push them into it," Mr. Fairchild says when asked if his children will become performers. His daughter already has invented a routine of her own, and loves watching the show. Correspondence courses comprise the bulk of the children's education but one girl recently went back to the States because high school begins there in mid-August.

Just as Mrs. Fairchild grew up among the tents and animals, their children know nothing else and will likely yearn for nothing else. "Every day there's a new playground and they are able to spend the day with us," says Mr. Fairchild, who's also glad he doesn't have to say goodbye to his wife for eight hours, five days a week.

But what does he think of circus life? "I enjoy it. There are a lot of miserable people who hate getting up and going to work and I feel lucky I can make a living doing something I really enjoy. The audience is really appreciative and that gives you a good feeling." And the entire circus staff becomes your extended family. "Everyone is so close."

Back under the big top, the show continues. Nina is back, this time with Brittany and Viola. A man performs a spectacular show of balance and strength. The clowns do their bit to make everyone forget the "real world" and the aerial artists once again astound everyone.

With all the fun and frivolity, it's almost enough to make you want to run off and join the circus.

Junior Rangers rough it in the bush for a summer

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

FOR THE 30 GIRLS at the Moose Lake Junior Ranger Camp, hard work has never been so much fun.

Instead of the usual summer jobs in stores or restaurants, they decided to spend their two-month vacation doing manual labour in the bush. And as they make their way back to camp, with blistered feet and calloused hands, they don't think about the hard day's work they have just put in. They are too busy sharing new experiences with their new family.

"I feel sorry for my friends (at home) because they didn't get a chance to do this," says 17-year-old Nicole Eagles of St. Catharines. "You learn so much. It's not just work, work, work—it's a chance to grow with other people."

For many of the girls it is their first time away from home, and they are forced to get along with 29 other people, says Jennifer McLean, the camp foreman. And while it may seem like an impossible task when they first set foot in camp, by the end of the summer solid friendships have been formed.

Instead of judging people solely on outside appearances, the girls learn to accept friends based on what is inside. "At home we have our group of friends and everyone is content with that," says Nicole. "Here we get a taste of different kinds of people."

The camp is made up of 24 junior rangers, most of whom are 17 years old (some will be 17 by the end of the year). In addition to McLean, there are two sub-foremen, and three junior sub-foremen.

Monday through Thursday are work days with the crews doing bush work—building portages, reorganizing snowmobile trails, maintaining trout spawning beds, and doing Frost Centre maintenance (the camp is located just north of the Frost Centre, and is affiliated with it).

Friday is an education day at the Frost Centre. Each department—lands, parks, fish and wildlife, timber, etc.—take a day to teach the girls about resource management. There is usually a lecture in the morning, and an outing for the rest of the day. They may visit a trail in Algonquin Park, or a forest stand after it has been logged.

"It's an enjoyable day," says McLean. "They don't have to put on their work boots and hard hats, and they bring along their bathing suits, and we have a swim at lunch."

The day begins at 7 a.m. with the wake-up bell. Breakfast is served at 7:10 a.m., and it's off to the Frost Centre at 8 a.m. The crews are made up of up to eight girls plus a foreman or someone from the Frost Centre (if one girl is working on a computer at the centre for instance, they will not assign a foreman to sit beside her all day). The work day ends at 4:30 p.m. with the girls having netted $15 plus room and board for their day's work.

The program provides the girls with an opportunity to gain valuable work experience and insight into the field of natural resources. They understand how the Ministry of Natural Resources works, and McLean says the ministry encourages the junior rangers, many of whom have now started to think about a career with an environmental focus.

"Most of the girls decide to go into natural resources work. It's the doorway to a career," says McLean. "And the MNR keeps that in mind. (They think) 'Hey! Let's make a good impression on these girls. This is where our employees are coming from.' The girls are treated quite well."

Camp maintenance is done Saturday morning, and for the rest of the weekend they have time off to suntan, stay up late on Saturday night, and sleep in on Sunday morning.

The foremen try to organize activities for Saturday afternoon and evening, and there are also special events held in conjunction with other junior ranger camps in the province. Last week a boys' camp from Round Lake near Pembroke came for a dance. They have had an inter-camp Olympics, and the girls have celebrated Hallowe'en and Christmas over the course of their two months away. The program is a combination of "work, education, and social," says McLean.

Hard work is a lot of fun for the girls at Moose Lake Junior Rangers Camp, affiliated with the Leslie M. Frost

The summer experience also provides an opportunity for the girls to grow and mature, and McLean says she often sees a noticeable improvement in the way the girls view themselves and others.

"It's neat watching them change over the summer," she says. "The improvement is remarkable."

"It's given me a chance to look at myself. There's been a lot of time to think about my life and what I'm going to do," says Teresa Foord, 17. "I've learned to live away with 29 other people all day, every day, and to live with myself. You think 'Hey! I've been away from home for two months, and I did really well.'"

The camp is a mixture of rustic and modern. The cabins are all made from logs and there is a swimming area, complete with a large dock and raft for lazing in the sun, and a sauna. Meals are prepared in the large kitchen by two cooks (except lunch, which the girls have to make themselves. Three girls each day act as "cookies" helping out the cook, and not going out on crew.) Breakfast and dinner are eaten in the dining hall, where the names of past campers are hung on plaques around the room. There is also a "rec" hall where the girls hold their dances or light a fire on cold evenings.

However, not every aspect of camp life is as luxurious. The kitchen and main lights are powered by propane, and last weekend the tank ran dry, leaving them to find their way around in the dark and eat cold food until Monday. The cabins themselves have no electricity, and there is no running water in the shared bathrooms. (One of the cookies is responsible for filling a can with lake water for face washing and fresh water for brushing teeth.)

"They can't just flick on a light or plug in their curling irons," says McLean. "We write them a letter once they have been accepted saying there is no electricity, and telling them what kind of gear they need to bring. We let them know everything before they come."

The camp was built in 1977 by a boy's junior ranger camp, and went into full operation as a girl's camp in 1978. It is situated beside Mouse Lake, but the boys thought the name was too "wimpy" and changed it to Moose Lake. The cabins have gradually replaced large tents on wooden platforms.

Information about the camp is passed on largely by word-of-mouth, and sometimes through the guidance department at high schools. The junior rangers are chosen on "pretty well a first come, first serve basis". There is a waiting list for the program.

Artistry blooms at Minden Horticultural Society show

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

BLOOMING FORTH AT the community centre last week, the Minden and District Horticultural Society displayed a festival of flowers for their 10th annual show.

Presented by show committee members Jean Robson, Irene Fuhr, Peg Harrington and Elizabeth Carrell, an array of plant life forms was shown by the society's close to 100 members on Thursday and Friday: from asters to zinnias in the flower specimens; beets to zucchini in the fruits and vegetables; and African violets to fuchsia in the potted plants.

Men had the chance to get creative in the decorative section, with categories "Nature At Its Rugged Best," using stones, bark and moss; and "Cheers," where those interested in tipping used wine glasses, brandy snifters and beer steins.

Just reciting the titles for the general decorative section gives one an idea of the idyllic floral scenes: Festival Of Flowers, Mardi Gras, Market Place, Celebrate The Loon, Oriental Fantasy and Up, Up and Away. The category Thumbelina was more than a little unusual. Featuring flowers in a thimble which couldn't exceed 2 inches in any direction, these miniatures were certainly a visual treat.

Kids under 16 also had the chance to try their hand at growing and arranging with sweet peas and beans categories, pictures made using different seeds and the arrangements "I love you, Mother," "Celebration" and "English Garden Maze" using plasticene, cedar and pine.

nual Show last week. Ashley helped her grandmother, Irene Fuhr, gather up her many ribbons.

Minden Community Centre a blooming success. Story highlights some of the winning entrants.

Matthew Hamilton won the special prize for most overall points in the junior division with 26 points, and Jean Cox won in the adult division with 87.

Along with Cox and Hamilton, the following members won awards: Michael and Mark Hamilton, Tonya Jefford, Edna and George Tipton, Annie Kernahan, Illa Cooper, Verne Graham, Evelyn Trepanier, Beatrice Taylor, Lorna and Jay Roland, Ruth Rice, Peg Harrington, Shirley Colliss and Irene Fuhr.

The horticultural society meets the first Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at the Minden Cultural Centre.

What could these subjects possible have in common, you ask? Well, they are just a few of the new items available through your local branch of the Haliburton County Public Library.

Can there be anyone out there who doesn't know that we have over 500, 16 mm films and access to over 10,000 more through our AV-Net computer system?

We continue to add as many new films as we can each year and have been recently developing our holdings of VHS cassettes. While we do not have an extensive collection, we can borrow from others in the Southern Ontario Library Service—Trent area.

Rangers exciting job benefitting all and last year some of the camps were closed and the number of 500 positions were dropped.

"I would like to see the program expand again. I don't think it was a problem with interest, because there is a waiting list this year, and this is the first time in years we've been at capacity," says McLean. "I think it's a very beneficial program and would support it to the end. I was a junior ranger in 1983 and I still use the things I learned that summer."

The foremen have to take an intensive five-day training program before the girls arrive at the camp. They are taught everything they could possibly need to know when they are dealing with 24 teenage girls—first aid, dealing with homesickness, recognizing drug and alcohol use, back care, dealing with problem teenagers, and defensive driving.

One of their most important jobs is being there for the girls when they need someone to talk with, and McLean says she stresses communication. They don't want to appear superior to the rest of the camp.

"They (the foremen) have gotten to know us, and they haven't segregated themselves," says Nicole. "We feel like we're on the same level as them, and can go and talk to them."

"We've shared a lot of laughs and a lot of eucure games," adds Teresa.

Safety and consideration are two major concerns for McLean, who says she "nearly drove them crazy in the beginning". While working the girls must be wearing their hard hats, boots, and jeans or workpants, and they are trained for the jobs and tools they will be using. Their rooms have to be cleaned and beds made each morning, and a 10:30 p.m. curfew is strictly enforced.

"I don't want them up until 1:00 a.m. and then have them not be able to do their job the next morning," she says. "It's quite a reasonable rule and I think they agree."

While there are rules that need to be followed, and the job is not as cushy as their friend's back home, there is not one person at Moose Lake Junior Ranger Camp who wouldn't describe their summer as "the time of their life."

"It's been a challenge," says Teresa. "And when you're done, you feel really good about yourself."

Scholarship awarded

Tracy Emmerson of Haliburton has won a Centennial scholarship to Wilfrid Laurier University, located in Waterloo.

The $1,200 award, renewable for another three years for a total value of up to $4,800, was based on her interim mark of 90 per cent at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. She will study honors business administration.

A total of 53 first-year students with a minimum average of 90 per cent were awarded Centennial scholarships.

Brad Illife, left, and Bruce Sawyer, both of Haliburton, display two of the salmon and rainbow trout ranging in weight from 8 lbs to 25 lbs they landed recently while fishing in Lake Ontario on a charter boat owned by another local resident, Gord McWalters. The boat operates out of Port Darlington.

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Hi folks! As you may know Bill, Jason and I are in limbo so to speak. We have been staying a Spruce Glen Trailer Park since the last holiday weekend and could be here until early September. We are total green horns at trailer living but I'm learning.

Some letters have been arriving at Norland Post Office for me so I'll give you now, whatever news I have albeit somewhat late.

Some 30 local recreation committee members from the Norland area were feted at the home of Mary and George Cowen awhile back in thanks for all the members hard work. A whole pig was barbecued for the occasion and, I'm told, it was a great day for everyone but the poor old pig.

Happy belated birthday to Mrs. Ken Farrell on Saturday, July 22. There was a birthday party at the Norland Community Hall. Checkers Restaurant north of Norland burned to the ground recently.

The Canada Day Celebrations July 1 held at Ward Park, Norland, included a games day with running races, sack races, three bag races, balloon and egg tosses, horseshoe pitching, a nail pound, tug of war and hay rides with Buck Graham's team of horses. There was also a snack bar hosted by the Norland Ladies Auxiliary. It was a terrific day for all.

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by Eleanor Cooper

It's farewell to Paula Kirchner and family as they move to the Maritimes. The Cowlings are arriving on the Irish Line in their place. Welcome to Jim and Shirley.

Pat and Bev Hicks of Oshawa have been visiting her father, Bob Barry, lately.

Large groups of family and friends attended Melanie and David Nicholls' wedding dance on Saturday evening. It was good to see Grenville Stamp able to be present with his family. Best wishes to the new couple as they take up residence in Orillia.

During Saturday afternoon a yard sale at the Centre was operated by Pat Bain and Carol Stamp. They report its success and that they had fun too.

Craig Bain (son of Pat and Gerald) has been at Junior Ranger Camp, north of Geraldton all summer. The camp is on Springwater Lake. Greetings Craig, from Guilford!

The Rev. Doug Candy, summer resident at Haliburton Lake, was guest speaker at the Brotherhood of Anglican Churchmen at St. Andrew's Church on Sunday morning. He drew attention to the work of Jean Vanier with the L'Arche communities and emphasized working into the lives of suffering people as a way of learning how to experience the love of God. The September B.A.C. will also be at St. Andrew's.

Vacation Bible School is being held this week at Eagle Lake community church. Children 4-12 are welcome.

A party for Dan Mawbey was hosted by Greg Cooper on Friday evening. A wedding shower for Dan's bride-to-be, Linda Cutler, was held at Bev and Kevin Sisson's on Saturday afternoon. It was a complete surprise to Linda. Best wishes and congratulations to this couple whose wedding takes place on Saturday at St. George's church in Haliburton.

The circus at Stanhope was a huge drawing card for children and parents of the Guilford area on Saturday. From elephants trained to help put up tents in early morning to clowns and animal acts in circus time proper; it was a thrill and wonder to the ones who watched and enjoyed every bit of it.

Cyd and Martin Rapson are at the golf course house for a week with the Ken Rapson's.

An anniversary service for over 80 years in the community of the Baptist Church in West Guilford was organized by the Rev. Benson on Sunday. Richard Fielding spoke briefly about some of the highlights over the years and of the church's contribution to the community.

Thanks to Harry Randall for his time and generosity in sharing his pontoon boat for the transportation of the Sesquicentennial cross up to St. Andrew's for our special, wonderful service.

Looking back into family's history

CARNARVON NEWS

by Ann McKay

Holidaying with Mildred and Stan Archer were her cousin and family Mrs. Janet Hitchins and husband David, daughters Susie and Zoe of England. Their son was visiting relatives in the Wasaga Beach area. They are very interested in family history and have documents dating back to the 1700's on ancestors. Also visiting with the Archers was cousin Mrs. Penrite of Guelph. On Saturday they attended the wedding of Kerrie Bice in Huntsville.

We are pleased to hear Mrs. Alec Stephenson is home from Peterborough, after surgery. A speedy return to good health is wished from her many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Ron Davies and family of Bridgenorth spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Bob Cowan.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barnhart, Mrs. Doris Redner and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Davis of Kirkfield enjoyed a week's camping trip.

Dennis Roberts, son of Dennis and Bonnie Roberts of Haliburton, graduated from the corporate communication program at Centennial College and is employed as a Lasergraphic Supervisor at Alphagraphics Print Shops of the Future, located in Scarborough, Ontario.

Forest stand surveys will help to study uses of dead or dying trees

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The Leslie M. Frost Natural Resources Centre is surveying forest stands in the area in hopes of establishing a model for the Algonquin region.

Wildlife technician Christy MacDonald will be determining the kinds and number of snags which exist in different types of forest communities. A snag is the common forestry term for dead or dying trees.

The snag will provide food and shelter for several different wildlife species, mostly birds. Insects feed on the rotting material inside the tree, and lay their eggs there. Birds such as the Hairy Woodpecker, Black-capped Chickadee, Osprey, and the seldom seen Northern Saw-whet Owl will eat the insects.

Other animals, such as the Pine Marten, Northern Flying Squirrel, and Northern Long-eared Bat, will use empty cavities in the snags to rear young, and for dens during the winter.

Timber crews have been going through ten different types of stands around the Frost Centre, including hard woods, mixed woods, and conifers. They walk along a section of the stand and measure any snag they come across.

"The crews take down the diameter, height, species, and any signs they see of wildlife use, like a nest," says MacDonald. "They will do two or three stands of each type, and will keep going until they find a sampling medium." (For example, if one stand has five snags, and the next has ten, the crew may do several more stands until the numbers level off.)

The information will be compiled and given to the Ministry of Natural Resources foresters and wildlife managers, and they will determine if any special action to protect snags needs to be taken. MacDonald says under the health act the foresters are required to remove any trees that are health hazards, therefore if people will be working around a snag that could fall over, it would have to be cut down.

The foresters will decide how many snags per hectare should be left, and this information can then be applied to other areas in the region. The survey should be completed by the end of August.

St. Andrew's Church in West Guilford rejoices over cross

by Eleanor Cooper

It came up the river and lakes in Harry Randall's pontoon boat on the morning of August 9 and docked on shore of Green lake under the big pine tree. Earl Cooper donned his full piper's regalia and boarded the craft with Harry. I carried the St. Andrew's flag and my sister, Kathleen Owens, held the poster declaring what it was all about: Rejoice, Anglicans in Toronto Diocese. 150 Years!

As we sped upriver to the church we waved to people on shore, the Bob Frasers and the Hillcrest Haven people, the people who waved to us from the bridge just before we landed at Holly Sisson's shore. It was a great welcome for us and the boat that met us halfway downriver—Ken and Valerie Chumbley with daughter Laura and Erma Sisson.

Diane Dron took a video and cameras snapped as we processed uphill behind the cross which was carried by adults and children alike. We entered the church ahead of the cross which had to be lain on its side after all because our ceiling wasn't high enough to accommodate it height.

The service of evening prayer was a gorgeous one. The packed church sang heartily.

Summer guests joined the congregation for the service and for the fellowship over tea, coffee and goodies afterwards. It was a positive and happy witness to our faith, one that will hold a special place in the memories of those who were privileged to be part of it.

Enjoy summer heat while it lasts

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

The Dorset Library is moving to new facilities in the Dorset Recreation Centre. It will open Saturday, August 19 at 3:30 PM so come and enjoy the new surroundings.

Happy Birthday wishes to Audie Tracey who celebrated on August 14.

Sincere best wishes are extended to Lance Payne for a speedy recovery. Lance is a patient in Toronto General.

While sweltering in the summer heat, take heart. Remember that January is only five months away. Try taking a dip in the lake just at dusk. The water is usually calm then and it is a great cooling system.

If you like to walk you can still enjoy the activity in the summer. Try a mile or two at 7 AM while it is still cool and it will really start you day off right.

A very impressive ceremony took place at St. Ambrose Anglican Church, Baysville, on Sunday, July 30th with the celebration of a new ministry. The Reverend Michael Francis Cottrell was welcomed as the new minister of the lake of Bays Mission, which includes Fox Point, Port Cunningham, Baysville and Dorset Anglican church, all which were represented at the service. The celebrants were Archdeacon Noel Groater and Reverend Michael Cottrell. The Preacher was Rev. Paul Morley.

The Foot Clinic will be held on August 16 and will be at the Firehall and not the Recreation Centre as was previously mentioned. Call Haliburton 1-457-1391 collect.

We had a surprise visit from some members of a family who lived here as young people. Agnes Cassidy of Orillia and her younger brother Clem and his wife Helen, of Sarnia, were driving through and stopped to say hello. Clem and his family have had a summer home on Lake Kushog for the past 30 years. The Frank Cassidy's, their parents and their family live in Dorset in the early years and had a general store where the municipal parking lot now is located, next to Cedar Narrows Restaurant, which was then the Dorset Hotel. Mr. Cassidy was the Postmaster at that time. The family moved to Orillia when the older children were in their early teens.

The Hungerford informs us that they have added a new Common Meeting room, next to the dining room at Lumina Lodge and there is a large beam going through the centre. From this beam hang the light fixtures that were originally in the Dorset Anglican Church. These fixtures did not give enough light in the church so were replaced several years ago with better light giving ones. Older things, that people have gotten used to, are always cherished, so it is gratifying to know that they have an appropriate setting.

Andrea, Mirjam, Arja-Liisa Hillo, daughter of Andy and Laila Hillo from Elephant Lake, Graduated on June 24 from George Brown College, Toronto, in Graphic Design. Andrea is going back to College for more education for her career as a graphic artist/designer.

Guilford news...

Continued from page 21 from North York. They are long time summer cottagers, over thirty years, and are now part of the Guilford scene year round. Thanks for phoning in the news.

Sid and Louise Cooper have been visiting in Ottawa and in Iroquois over the past week. They were guests on Sunday at the double wedding of four people who had all been their students at H.H.S.S. in former years. Jennifer and Heidi Tashlin; Ralf and Falk Fluegel, sons of Wolf and Elke Fluegel of West Guilford. Their daughter, Gasa, was a bridesmaid. The wedding took place at the Seventh Day Adventist Church in Ottawa. The happy occasion was enhanced by the showing of a film compiled by Wolf Fluegel of the two families when they were very young. Best wished to Jennifer and Ralf and to Heidi and Falk.

Bessie Collens has recently had a three-week trip in Ireland. She was accompanied by their aunt, Mrs. Rebecca McBride of Hamilton and her cousin, Kenneth McBride of Waterloo. They visited the schools were Bessies' parents had gone and the church the McBrides had attended as youngsters. They stayed with relatives in County Cavan on a farm while there. This was Bessie's first trip to her parents' home, and her delight in it was evident as she related the incidents of the time spent there.

Jean Morrison (Kay and Perry's daughter) has spent a week at camp. Crossroads, near Gravenhurst.

Now a final reminder and urging to attend the forum conducted at Haliburton Wildlife by R.D. Lawrence on August 19 at 7 PM. The importance of protecting fish and rivers, wildlife in woods, and conserving our environment cannot be exaggerated. If you are a fisherman, if you love canoeing, if you're a cottager, or a year-round resident who simply has a feel for being at one with your natural surroundings, you will want to be part of this event. It costs $5. The worth is beyond that entirely. It takes place at the Boiler Room: The heading is Lakes in Crisis.

Kinmount

Well folks, stay well and happy, read the Echo and if you find yourself on highway 35 between Norland and Coboconk and spot a flag flying over a sign marked Spruce Glen, come on in and say hi. We can be found at Site 2.

The new hours for the Kinmount Library are as follows: Tuesday 6:30 PM to 8:30 PM, Thursday, Friday and Saturday 2:00 to 4:00 PM.

HALIBURTON DISTRICT REAL ESTATE BOARD

DEFINITION OF A REAL ESTATE BOARD

"A real estate board is to the real estate profession what the bar association is to the lawyer and the medical association is to the doctor. It is the force for good. It is a force for the betterment of its practitioners and the public they serve. In such an association there are crystallized the rules of conduct, the grades and standards of stern discipline which protect the community the sense of integrity and the high qualities and ideas which you demand, and which characterize the service of men of good will engaged in an honourable profession."
